Over 600 Missing Or Dead, Property Damage Enormous

MANILA (UP)—The Philippine Red Cross radioed the world Red Cross headquarters in Geneva today asking for assistance in dealing with 450,000 persons made destitute by a tropical storm.

The Philippine Red Cross said 192 are dead, 452 missing, and 450,000 destitute following the tropical storm which swept through the central Philippines last Wednesday.

Property damage is estimated at $50,000,000. The local Red Cross said it was unable to meet relief requirements and asked for the assistance of other societies.

Meanwhile, the weather bureau announced it had located a new storm 500 miles east of Davao on the southern coast of Mindanao, moving north-northwest with winds up to 35 miles an hour.

Gordon Says Flour Industry Promised No Prosecutions

OTTAWA (CP)—Donald Gordon said today the flour-milling industry had been promised it would not be prosecuted under anti-combine legislation for price-fixing during the war that was carried out under instructions from the Prices Board.

F. A. McGregor, who resigned this week as Combines Commissioner, had recommended prosecution of firms in the industry for alleged price-fixing during the war.

Mr. Gordon, wartime head of the Prices Board and newly-appointed president of the Canadian National Railways, told reporters: "I strongly objected to Mr. McGregor's recommendation that industries be prosecuted for doing the things they were told to do by me in wartime."

Justice Minister Garson will table Mr. McGregor's report on the industry in the Commons Monday.

Mr. Gordon said he also had objected to the use of information gathered by the Prices Board as evidence in any prosecution under the Combines Investigation Act.

Berlin Reports Big Underground In Russian Army

BERLIN (UP)—The British-licensed Berlin Telegraph claimed today that a large underground resistance movement exists inside the Russian army.

The dispatch, datelined Berlin, was based on alleged reports from Russian officers, one of them a major, who has fled to the west.

Western Allied intelligence authorities discounted the Telegraph reports.

"I am willing to go along with the fact that there is discontent in the Red Army," said a high intelligence officer. "But resistance inside the Russian Army is virtually impossible."

PAMPHLETS APPEAR

The Telegraph dispatch said pamphlets have appeared periodically in Russian troop barracks urging all soldiers to oppose their Communist dictators.

Telegraf said the leaflets, written in Russian, call for "Death to the Trants" and "Freedom for the workers."

One leaflet said: "What are you? A Bolshevik slave or a loyal son of your fatherland, Russia?"

Another excerpt said, "The fight for freedom will end in the national revolution. Have you found your place in the fight?"

Canada Enters Pact To Cut Cable Rates

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is entering into an international agreement designed to simplify communications traffic and sharply reduce the full rate charged for sending overseas cables and telegrams.

A spokesman for the Department of Transport disclosed Friday night Canada is one of 68 countries expected to ratify the agreement. It will cut by 25 per cent the full-rate charges for overseas cables.

Details of the agreement were announced in Washington Friday night by the U.S. Federal Communications Commission. It is scheduled to go into effect next July 1 and cuts will be made on rates in force Feb. 1—the deadline set for ratification of the pact.

Saanich Hospital, More Beds In City Advocated In Report

By Staff Representative

The Hamilton report on hospitals in British Columbia, released Friday in Vancouver, proposes that Victoria's two major hospitals have a total of 1,125 beds available for acute cases by 1971, and that a hospital be built in Saanich sometime within the next 22 years, but "preferably by 1956."

Expansion of eight hospitals in the lower Vancouver Island area and setting up of three community clinics at Lake Cowichan, Parksville and Port Renfrew was also advocated.

James A. Hamilton, Minneapolis, head of the group which carried out the appraisal, did not give details of the proposed Saanich hospital and no site was suggested.

SWITCH TO CLINICS

Hospitals at Ladysmith, Chemainus and Rest Haven Hospital at Sidney should be switched from community hospitals to community clinics where treatment and diagnostic facilities would be available, the report said.

Basis of this suggestion is to avoid duplication of facilities. Mr. Hamilton said it was felt there were large community hospitals in nearby cities which could be easily reached from the three centres.

He pointed out that the community hospitals could thus be able to hire a better calibre of workers and specialists, since they covered a wider area.

The Port Renfrew clinic should be a little different than other clinics in that it should have 15 beds. This is necessary, according to the report, since the Port Renfrew clinic will have to carry out more functions than other clinics because of its relatively isolated position.

ISLAND PROGRAM

Here is what the report proposed for hospitals on the southern section of the island. Jubilee Hospital, Victoria — Should increase its present 404 beds to 450 by 1951 and will need 83 new beds by 1971 plus estimated additional requirements of 255 beds, so that by 1971 it would have 725 beds.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria — Should increase its present 306 beds to 340 by 1951. There will be, the report says, 185 acceptable beds by that time, so that 155 new beds will be needed within the next two years. To bring the total number of beds up to a recommended 400 by 1971, there will be needed 79 replacements and 60 beds for additional requirements.

Veterans' Hospital, Victoria — While its present capacity was noted, there were no recommendations for the Veterans' Hospital here since it is controlled by a federal government department.

Queen Alexander Solarium — It was recommended that the Solarium be given over to chronic ailments only and not handle any acute cases. Thus the 65 existing beds were considered to be non-acceptable for general acute cases by 1951. The Solarium handles mostly chronic cases now, so the report will result in no great change.

Lady Minto-Gulf Islands Hospital, Ganges — Needs 20 new beds by 1951 and should be a 20-bed hospital throughout the program.

King's Daughters Hospital, Duncan — Now has 94 beds, but requires 130 by 1951 and 165 by 1971.

Nanaimo General Hospital, Nanaimo — Requires 150 beds by 1951 and 200 beds by 1971. It has at the present time 110 beds, 13 of which were considered non-acceptable, so that 53 new beds are the requirements for the next two years.

It also suggested postponement of a settlement on Eritrea until the Assembly's next session, pending a report of an inquiry commission which will visit the East African territory in the meantime.

Probe Hint Third Plane Involved In Washington Crash

WASHINGTON (UP)—Government investigators are checking the possibility that a third plane may have figured in Tuesday's air disaster which took 55 lives, a spokesman said today.

The third plane—a U.S. Air Force B-25 bomber—was in the air approaches above the National Airport shortly before a P-38 fighter flown by Bolivian pilot Erick Rios Bridoux rammed an Eastern Air Lines plane.

The Washington Post suggested in a copyrighted dispatch that pilots of either the P-38 or the airliner, or both, misunderstood control tower instructions.

A Civil Aeronautics Board spokesman said investigating teams are checking all possibilities and that the presence of the third plane is "no news."

He said the investigators are checking the control tower reports from the nearby Bolling Air Force base and the Anacostia, Md., naval base as well as the National Airport tower's reports.

The B-25 had permission from the National Airport tower to make a simulated landing shortly before the air crash.

PILOT IS VETERAN

Pilot of the B-25, which subsequently landed at Bolling, was Lieut. Ray H. Deem, a combat pilot of Parkersburg, W.Va. Deem told the United Press, "I don't want to become involved, I'm clear."

A spokesman for the Civil Aeronautics Administration told the United Press that a report of traffic conditions at the time of the mishap showed there was a B-25 approaching the Bolling Air Force base, about 1½ miles from the National Airport.

Capt. William J. Lookadoo, public information officer at Bolling Field, said the B-25 got permission from the control tower at the National Airport to make a simulated landing, that is to come in low without actually touching the ground. He said none of the three fliers in the air force craft saw any other planes flying in the immediate vicinity at the time.

Victoria Tugs Find Grounded Freighter In Serious Plight

"Things look pretty hopeless" for the Panamanian freighter Andalusia, grounded on the Olympic Peninsula in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, according to H. B. Elworthy, president of Island Tug and Barge Ltd., who has two salvage tugs at the scene.

Mr. Elworthy said the Andalusia is holed in every hold but No. 1, and that it looks as though she may break up. Both her engine-room and boiler-room are reported flooded.

The Andalusia, carrying a crew of 27, grounded following a fire in engine-room. The tug Island Warrior, carrying Norman Turner, superintendent of Island Tug and Barge, and pumps and salvage equipment, sailed from here Friday morning and the Island Commander sailed from Port Townsend, reaching the scene late in the day. Both are standing by the wrecked ship, reported perilously aground on a pinnacle of rock about four miles south of Neah Bay.

A Seattle report said 17 crew members and one woman were taken to Port Angeles by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Fir and that eight other crew members and the ship's captain remained aboard the grounded vessel.

Salvage company officials were busy this morning trying to formulate some plan to save the vessel in spite of her dangerous position.

Crew Of Fishboat Safe After Vessel Burns Off Nanaimo

NANAIMO (BUP)—The skipper and crew of the fishing boat Carlyle were reported safe today after their vessel caught fire and sank off Nanaimo Friday night.

Provincial Police said the gill-netter, owned by the Canadian Fishing Co. of Vancouver, was destroyed while operating near Newcastle Inlet, within sight of the mainland.

They said Capt. J. Johnson and his men were able to climb into a small dory that was towed to the scene after a Departure Bay storekeeper had reported seeing the Carlyle ablaze. None of the crew was injured.

Hundreds of spectators gathered along the shoreline to watch the rescue and see the flames which reflected more than a mile over the water and burned high into the air.

The vessel burned to the waterline and sank in nine fathoms despite the efforts of a police fire boat and a tug which tried to save it.

Ready To Ask Truman To Act In Coal Tie-Up

By UNITED PRESS

Striking C.I.O. steel workers hoped that the big Republic Steel Corporation would settle today on their terms, but chief federal mediator Cyrus Ching was reported as almost ready to ask President Truman to use the Taft-Hartley Act to end the coal walkout.

Steel union officials said there was a "good chance" that Republic, third largest steel producer, would agree to a $100-a-month pension plan similar to that accepted by Bethlehem Steel.

If so, they said, the firm's 54,000 employees would return to work immediately. That would leave 376,000 steel workers on strike.

The walkout was extended today to five Timken Roller Bearing Co. plants. Inland Steel, meanwhile, met with union officers to discuss the union's new demands based on the Bethlehem agreement. Two small firms, Lukens Steel at Coatesville, Pa., and the Northwestern Steel and Wire Co. at Sterling, Ill., agreed to the union terms Friday night, sending 4,750 employees back to work.

Ching called a Monday meeting with southern coal producers, but industry sources believed President Truman would be forced to take Taft-Hartley action.

Two diamond rings and other articles were stolen in two house robberies during Friday afternoon and night, city police reported today.

At the home of Mrs. E. Ashman, 2856 Prior Street, a burglar forced a basement door and stole two diamond rings.

Police report that one of the rings had five large diamonds and the other one large diamond and diamond chips on either side of it.

An electric razor, two change purses containing $2, a Chinese figure and a box-type radio valued at $35 were stolen from a room at 820 St. Charles Street, city police reported. It is the relief of police that entry was made by the kitchen door.

Injured Logger Crawled Four Hours

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP)—Two loggers are in hospital here today, one of them after crawling four hours through the bush with a broken leg.

Albert Bettis, 39, made the painful journey to his skiff from the interior of a small coastal island where he was hand logging.

Despite the compound fracture he launched the boat with his shoulder, rowed out to a gasboat and then piloted the larger craft four miles to hospital.

His only complaint was that he lost his "snore" on the trail.

Chinese Reds In Tito Line

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—All dependable evidence indicates Moscow lacks direct control over the Chinese Communists, an Associated Press foreign correspondent said today.

Seymour Topping, former A.P. correspondent at Nanking, told the closing session of the 16th annual meeting of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association:

"Peiping obediently follows Moscow's lead, but almost certainly not on direct orders but rather because of ideological faith," he said.

NEED HELP OF U.S.

"Like the situation in Yugoslavia before the split with Russia came, China has no significant Russian forces within her boundaries and the strategic agencies of internal control are not, so far as we know, in the hands of Russian agents."

"There are strong tendencies within Communist China towards a form of Titoism. For the present they seem to have been effectively blocked. The basis for Chinese Titoism comes from a realization that China needs the close friendship of the United States more than she needs the friendship of any other country."

Victoria May Have First Mayoralty Race In 5 Years

Possibility of a mayoralty race in Victoria for the first time in five years loomed large today with the announcement by Charles S. Henley, retired financier, that, in response to requests, he was considering running for the chief magistrate's office in the Dec. 8 elections.

If Mr. Henley does run for office it will be the first time that Mayor George has had any opposition. He defeated the late Andrew McGavin in December, 1944, ending Mayor McGavin's record of eight consecutive years in office.

Mr. McGavin, in turn, defeated David Leeming in Dec., 1936, who had been mayor for five consecutive years, the same length of time that Mayor George has held office.

Mayor George, apart from the December, 1944, election contest, has been elected by acclamation twice for one-year term of office and once, in Dec., 1947, for a two-year term.

WANTS CITY MANAGER

Mr. Henley said today he was considering running for mayor although he had not decided.

Mr. Henley strongly favors amalgamation of Greater Victoria. He advocates a city manager with "a great deal of power." Mr. Henley said he would like to "take away the strings" at present proposed for the position of director of administration for the city.

It was Mr. Henley who submitted a proposal in 1936 for a solution of Victoria's financial difficulties. Under the scheme shareholders in England and eastern Canada were asked to exchange their holdings for new securities with 20 years added to their maturity. In addition, a sinking fund was arranged to take care of the holdings as they reached maturity.

The proposals, approved by the shareholders, were incorporated and the necessary legislation, known as the Debt Refunding Act, was passed in 1937.

Montrealers See First Snowfall; Mild On Prairies

By British United Press

The weatherman threw the book at Canada today with warm waves, cold waves, snow, rain, sleet, fog and drizzle reported within the last 24 hours.

Montrealers awoke this morning to find the city covered with its first snow blanket of the year. The Dominion Weather Office reported officially the blanket was a quarter of an inch thick.

Toronto, Hamilton and Windsor all had dripping snow for the better part of Friday.

Most of Quebec experienced snow in various forms. In the south it was wet slushy stuff that quickly melted at mid-morning, but in the northern regions, the first powder fell on favorite winter ski resorts.

There were cloudy skies and low ceiling over most of British Columbia. Many parts of the province reported fog, but the sun was shining in Victoria.

The prairie provinces were basking in temperatures ranging between 60 and 70 degrees, while the Maritimes had rain and drizzle the weatherman said was likely to continue.

"My Three Years In Moscow"

Readers of the Victoria Times will get a look behind the Iron Curtain with publication in this newspaper of "My Three Years In Moscow." The author of this important work is Lt.-Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, who resigned as U.S. Ambassador to Moscow last March.

The first installment of this feature will appear in Monday night's edition of the Victoria Times. In it he will answer some of the questions which are agitating the minds of many people. What is Stalin like? Can Great Britain, Canada and the United States come to an understanding with him? Is he an absolute dictator?

Walter Bedell Smith is a 54-year-old professional soldier who rose from the rank of private, served his country as a top-rank military leader during World War II and as a key diplomat in ticklish United States-Soviet postwar relations.

LT.-GEN. BEDELL SMITH

Renew Attempts To Free Wrecked Ship

Seven tugs, including two from Victoria, this afternoon are making an attempt to free the cracked and partly-flooded Panamanian freighter Andalucia which is lodged tightly on a submerged reef in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Early morning salvage efforts were unsuccessful.

H. B. Elworthy, president of Island Tug and Barge Ltd., whose company tugs, the Island Warrior and Island Commander, are at the scene with four Foss Co. tugs and one U.S. Navy tug from Puget Sound ports, said this afternoon, "We're making an attempt, but we're not very hopeful."

For more than 24 hours the freighter has been teetering precariously on the sharp reef near the entrance to the strait nearly opposite Port Renfrew on Vancouver Island.

USE HIGH TIDE

The seven tugs were unable to free the big cargo ship on the flood tide about 1.30 this morning, but were making renewed attempts this afternoon with another high tide.

Island Housewives Will Pay Less For Christmas Turkeys

Vancouver Island housewives will probably pay 72 to 74 cents a pound for their Christmas turkeys this year.

This is the retail price suggested by the marketing committee of the Vancouver Island Turkey Improvement Association which for the first time this year is taking steps to prevent a temporary surplus of heavy-weight turkeys from flooding the Christmas market and bringing the price structure on all classes of turkeys down below production costs.

According to an official of the provincial agriculture department's poultry branch the proposed price, which is for Grade A, New York dressed birds weighing from 12 to 18 pounds, is less than that at which top-grade turkeys sold last year.

The turkey improvement asso-

Salvage experts thought there was a "50-50 chance" of pulling the Andalucia off, and keeping her afloat until she can be towed to a ship repair yard.

A battery of pumps put aboard during the night worked steadily to siphon out water, streaming into all but the No. 1 hold through cracks and strained seams.

The Andalucia, with a crew of 27 men and one woman, went aground Friday morning as the master, Capt. George Lemos, attempted to beach the ship.

The run towards shore was ordered when fire broke out in the engine room. The blaze was quenched by the crew after the vessel hit the reef about half a mile from land on the Olympic Peninsula.

The woman, Mrs. Katina Horatu, 26, assistant steward, and 17 other crew members were taken to Port Angeles at 1.20 this morning by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Flr.

One of the crew, Bernard Cantwell, told reporters there was no panic or excitement when the Andalucia struck the shoal.

Plans were announced today by C. E. Whitney-Griffiths, president of the association.

RETAILERS OBJECT

In the past Vancouver Island turkey producers have done heavy marketing of the large turkeys, weighing up to 30 pounds during the Christmas season. Retailers have experienced difficulty in selling the heavy birds with a result that the whole turkey price market has become unstable.

This year the association's members are arranging for pool storage of the big birds so that they may be released as required to hotels, restaurants and institutions which favor the heavyweights to the smaller birds.

"Eighty per cent of the Christmas demand is for birds of desirable household weights from 12 to 18 pounds and the dumping of an over-supply of heavy birds on the market could be disastrous for turkey producers across Canada," said Mr. Whitney-Griffiths.

The association has suggested that its members sell the 12 to 18-pound birds at 60 cents per pound. This will provide for a wholesale price of 62 to 64 cents and the retail price of 72 to 74 cents.

Armistice Theme For Sunday Sermons

In churches throughout Victoria Sunday the memory of the fallen in two world wars will be honored and in some cases an Armistice Day program will be presented.

Sunday afternoon at 3 a United Remembrance Day service will be held in Christ Church Cathedral. Rev. Moir A. J. Waters will preach.

Dr. A. E. Whitehouse will conduct services and preach both morning and evening at Metropolitan United Church. "The Grace of Gratitude" will be the topic for the morning sermon.

Anticipating Remembrance Day Nov. 11, Rev. J. L. W. McLean will speak on the subject "Peaks of Memory" at 7.30 in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

At First Baptist Church, Rev. G. R. Easter will conduct memorial service at 11 when the sermon topic will be "Sacrifice and Song."

By JIM McKEACHIE

The Hamilton report on hospitals in British Columbia, released Friday in Vancouver, proposes that Victoria's two major hospitals have a total of 1,125 beds available for acute cases by 1971, and that a hospital be built in Saanich sometime within the next 22 years, but "preferably, by 1956."

Expansion of eight hospitals in the lower Vancouver Island area and setting up of three community clinics at Lake Cowichan, Parksville and Port Renfrew was also advocated.

James A. Hamilton, Minneapolis, head of the group which carried out the appraisal, did not give details of the proposed Saanich hospital and no site was suggested.

SWITCH TO CLINICS

Hospitals at Ladysmith, Chemainus and Rest Haven Hospital at Sidney should be switched from community hospitals to community clinics where treatment and diagnostic facilities would be available, the report said.

Basis of this suggestion is to avoid duplication of facilities. Mr. Hamilton said it was felt there were large community hospitals in nearby cities which could be easily reached from the three centres.

He pointed out that the community hospitals could thus be able to hire a better calibre of workers and specialists, since they covered a wider area.

The Port Renfrew clinic should be a little different than other clinics in that it should have 15 beds. This is necessary, according to the report, since the Port Renfrew clinic will have to carry out more functions than other clinics because of its relatively isolated position.

ISLAND PROGRAM

Here is what the report proposed for hospitals on the southern section of the island. Jubilee Hospital, Victoria—Should increase its present 404 beds to 450 by 1951 and will need 83 new beds by 1971 plus estimated additional requirements of 255 beds, so that by 1971 it would have 725 beds.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria—Should increase its present 306 beds to 340 by 1951. There will be, the report says, 185 acceptable beds by that time, so that 155 new beds will be needed within the next two years. To bring the total number of beds up to a recommended 400 by 1971, there will be needed 79 replacements and 60 beds for additional requirements.

Veterans' Hospital, Victoria—While its present capacity was noted, there were no recommendations for the Veterans' Hospital here since it is controlled by a federal government department.

Queen Alexander Solarium—It was recommended that the Solarium be given over to chronic ailments only and not handle any acute cases. Thus the 65 existing beds were considered to be non-acceptable for general acute cases by 1951. The Solarium handles mostly chronic cases now, so the report will result in no great change.

Rest Haven Hospital, Sidney—Should become a community clinic in the long-range (20-year) program, but 20 beds will be needed by 1951. These should be transferred to Jubilee Hospital here later. The present 57 beds at Rest Haven were considered unacceptable.

Lady Minto-Gulf Islands Hospital, Ganges—Needs 20 new beds by 1951 and should be a 20-bed hospital throughout the program.

King's Daughters Hospital, Duncan—Now has 94 beds, but requires 130 by 1951 and 165 by 1971.

Nanaimo General Hospital, Nanaimo—Requires 150 beds by 1951 and 200 beds by 1971. It has at the present time 110 beds, 13 of which were considered non-acceptable, so that 53 new beds are the requirements for the next two years.

Ask Province Support Plan For Federal Education Aid

Vancouver Island teachers will submit a recommendation to the B.C. Teachers' Federation that support of the provincial government be sought in pressing for Dominion government financial aid in education.

The proposal was conceived at the concluding session this morning of the third annual Vancouver Island Teachers' Convention at Victoria High School. Those in attendance gave the idea their unanimous backing.

The B.C. Teachers' Federation has been one of a number of organizations throughout the Dominion which for some time has been seeking the federal government to accept some responsibility in education costs.

Charles Ovans, general secretary of the federation, in an address to this morning's meeting sounded an optimistic note that such aid was forthcoming. He said there was a good chance that the House of Commons might enact the necessary legislation in 1950 or 1951.

With urging from the provincial government, the Commons might act more quickly on the question than it otherwise might do.

PROGRESS MADE

Mr. Ovans noted that the question of federal government financing of education had been brought before Parliament in 1948 but at that time had produced little reaction. This year, he observed, lively debate ensued when the topic was introduced.

"That shows you what strides have been made in one year," he said. "We must continue to press the point and enlist all the support we can."

Dealing with the present school of financing in British Columbia, Mr. Ovans declared the province had "no clear-cut system."

He said the Cameron Report, brought down in 1945 and giving a system of dealing with educational financing in B.C., had lost its identity.

He noted certain phases of the Goldenberg Report, brought down later, had crept into the present method and that the situation was further confused since municipalities had been told they should use part of what they receive from the 3 per cent sales tax for education.

Mr. Ovans said he had heard reports that the Department of Education was now working on an entirely new system of educational financing.

"What that system is, and whether or not it will be to the advantage of teachers, we shall have to wait and see."

Full Program For Labor Minister During Monday Visit

LABOR MINISTER MITCHELL

A full round of visits, dinners, speech-making, and other official business has been planned for Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell during an all-day visit to Victoria Monday.

During the morning Mr. Mitchell is scheduled to meet Premier Byron Johnson and several other members of the provincial cabinet. At noon he will be guest of the cabinet at a luncheon to be held in the Union Club.

At 3 in the afternoon Mr. Mitchell will attend the opening of the Fairway vocational school on the Victoria High School grounds.

In the evening he will be guest of the Greater Victoria School Board for a dinner, also to be held in the Union Club. Mayor George of Victoria and the révéres of the three adjoining municipalities, along with senior officials of the provincial education department, are scheduled to attend the luncheon.

It is expected that Mr. Mitchell, following the dinner, will address a meeting of the Laurier Club to be held in Liberal Headquarters, 1322-A Government Street.

Mr. Mitchell will return to Vancouver Monday night. There on Tuesday he will attend the opening ceremonies for another vocational training school, a large structure fronting on Victory Square.

Earthquake Shakes 10,000 Square Miles Of South California

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—A strong earthquake shook San Diego and rocked 10,000 square miles of southern California at 12.43 Friday.

Sharpest quake here in eight years, it jarred buildings here with a powerful up-thrust motion followed by a north-south movement.

The tremor was felt lightly in Los Angeles, Long Beach, Riverside, Santa Ana and there was a clear shock in El Centro, on the San Andreas fault where heavy quakes have occurred before.

The quake was felt slightly at San Bernardino, but not at nearby Arrowhead Springs, which is almost directly atop the state's greatest earthquake fault, San Andreas.

California Institute of Technology's seismograph, in Pasadena, showed the quake was about 150 miles from here.

The Palomar Observatory on Palomar mountain near here felt the tremor, but lightly and for only a second or two, and no damage was reported.

Dr. K. O. Wright at the Saanich Observatory said a minor tremor about 1,000 miles away was recorded on the seismograph at 12.45 Friday afternoon.

Berlin Reports Big Underground In Russian Army

BERLIN (UP)—The British-licensed Berlin Telegraph claimed today that a large underground resistance movement exists inside the Russian army.

The dispatch, datelined Berlin, was based on alleged reports from Russian officers, one of them a major, who has fled to the west.

Western Allied intelligence authorities discounted the Telegraph reports.

"I am willing to go along with the fact that there is discontent in the Red Army," said a high intelligence officer. "But resistance inside the Russian Army is virtually impossible."

PAMPHLETS APPEAR

The Telegraph dispatch said pamphlets have appeared periodically in Russian troop barracks urging all soldiers to oppose their Communist dictators.

Telegraph said the leaflets, written in Russian, call for "Death to the Trants" and "Freedom for the workers." One leaflet said: "What are you? A Bolshevik slave or a loyal son of your fatherland, Russia?"

Another excerpt said, "The fight for freedom will end in the national revolution. Have you found your place in the fight?"

Chest Campaign To Reach Objective During Next Week

Officials of Greater Victoria's Community Chest campaign demonstrated today renewed optimism that this year's campaign will reach its objective. Further, they stated the goal would be achieved next week.

"It all depends, of course, on the continued support of the public," Eric Wainwright, campaign director stated. "But we feel we can rely on that."

Total campaign collections at noon today stood at $133,320. Quota set for this area is $140,000.

Teachers To Meet Again Next Year

Delegates attending the third annual Vancouver Island Teachers' Convention decided after some argument that another annual convention should be held next year.

Opposition to this proposal was voiced by some up-Islanders who believed sectional meetings in various districts would be better and less expensive than one meeting for the entire island.

When the question was decided, Victoria was again named as the convention city. Nanaimo was considered for a time as the choice for the convention.

Protests At Rent Ceiling Boost Continue To Be Heard

By Canadian Press

Protests from tenants and from labor organizations continued to mount today over Finance Minister Abbott's announcement that landlords may raise rents by 20 to 25 per cent starting Dec. 15.

Labor groups are discussing steps ranging from a one-day Canada-wide strike to public protest meetings to express their opposition. Meantime, a few spokesmen for the landlords suggest this third postwar increase is not enough for them and that rental controls should be removed altogether.

The increases can be blocked in any province that replaces federal rental ceilings with ceilings of its own, a federal government spokesman said. The provincial ceilings could be higher or lower than the federal ones. So far, however, no province has offered to enter the rent control field.

The suggestion of a one-day strike by the Canadian Congress of Labor was put forward by the Montreal Boot and Shoe Workers' Union (C.I.O.). But in Ottawa A. R. Mosher, C.C.L. president, called the proposal "utter nonsense." Earlier, Mr. Mosher had said the rent increase would mean a boost in the cost of living and that "a good many people are already paying rents above what they can afford."

A. L. Marks, executive member of the Edmonton Property Owners' Association, said: "This action to increase rents rather than remove rental controls is not only self-defeating but it actually prevents patriotic citizens who want to help in the housing shortage from doing so."

Finance Minister Abbott, in Montreal for the week-end, said the increases are "justifiable."

Church In India To Consolidate Social Services

Big problem of the Christian church in India now is to consolidate and co-ordinate its social services and to extend this work, Ven. C. R. H. Wilkinson, Archdeacon of Palampur in the East Punjab, India, said in Victoria, Friday.

Touring Vancouver Island this week in connection with the Anglican Church's "program of spiritual advancement," Archdeacon Wilkinson described work of the church in India.

"Since the partition of India into the twin dominions of India and Pakistan, peace has returned and internecine strife has died out," he said. "Now we can look to the future."

"Following the partition, there was a tremendous shift of population. Eight to ten million people moved from one side of the border to the other, Hindus moving into India and Mohammedans crossing into Pakistan."

Dr. Wilkinson said that with the return of peace, the church was intensifying its efforts to help the poor and the uprooted. Much of the work is done in co-operation with the Indian government, he added.

"We operate schools, hospitals and clinics and a new college has been established at Balata in Palampur, supported by all churches."

He praised the government's 50-year compulsory education program but said the chief stumbling block was the "indifference or lethargy of the villagers who would rather see their sons out working in the fields."

Dr. Wilkinson will return to India the end of November, will preach Sunday morning services at St. Mary's Oak Bay, and evening services at 7.30 at St. John's, Victoria.

Monday at 12.15 he will address a men's luncheon in Memorial Hall and at 8 in the evening, a mass meeting in the hall, when he will show slides and give a commentary.

Teachers Will Try Again For Right To Hold Public Office

The fight of teachers to gain the right to seek public office on municipal councils will continue, H. D. Dee, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, told teachers of Vancouver Island at a meeting this morning in Victoria High School.

The teachers were gathered for the final session of their third annual island convention in this city.

Mr. Dee was optimistic that next year the case of the teachers will be successful. This year the idea was rejected when it went before the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Recalling how the union dealt with the teachers' submission, Mr. Dee observed: "There was no vociferous or widespread objection to it this year and the voting was very close."

The vote, he noted, was taken by calling for "aye" and "nays." He said he believed that if the vote had been by ballot or actual division the resolution might have passed.

"The nays often shout louder than the ayes," he observed. Far from being bitter, Mr. Dee accepted the decision in good faith.

"We are making progress," he told the island teachers. "And I believe we are getting there."

Pleas of not guilty were entered by Thomas A. McNaughton and Gordon Rice, young Victoria men, when they appeared in city police court this morning jointly charged with stealing a wrist watch of over the value of $25 from Agnes Sawyer. Both elected trial before Magistrate H. C. Hall and were remanded to Nov. 8 Magistrate Hall set bail at $500 each.

TIMELY REMINDER

ACCOUNTS OF THE VISIT OF PRIME MINISTER JAWAHARLAL NEHRU to Vancouver this week have been almost unanimous in stressing that the outstanding impression left by the Indian leader was his great concept of the essential brotherhood of mankind and his belief that through fostering it the troubles of the world may be solved. It is not an inopportune time in the history of the globe for the western hemisphere to be visited by a man who not only preaches such a principle, but who lives it and has lived it for many years. For Pandit Nehru is the disciple of Mahatma Gandhi, and he has fully absorbed and put into practice the precepts of that great man. As leader of more than 300,000,000 Indians he has an opportunity to make those principles felt in a manner perhaps not available to any other world figure. His position is unique, his philosophy is as old as humanity in concept but as new as jet planes in application, and there can be no doubt that he is destined to play an important part in those international affairs to be unfolded during the next few years.

There is greatness in a man who could struggle for a large part of his life to free his fellow-countrymen from what he called the yoke of foreign domination, who could spend 13 years in various British jails for his efforts, and who then, finding himself the political leader of that great sub-continent in its hour of achieving independence, could swallow all the enmity of the past and decide to stay within the British Commonwealth as a matter of principle. All the personal elements were wiped out. "Basically," he explained the other day, "we decided there are far too many disruptive forces breaking up the world. Any act which destroys one sphere of co-operation is a backward step."

It is not to be thought that Pandit Nehru's message will be universally accepted and made an example of behavior by all who hear him. Human affairs are not resolved so simply. It is very difficult to be a philosophical pacifist, for instance, unless one is surrounded by others of a like mind, and this is especially true in the international field. But it is well that the ideal be kept before us, and by someone in a position to speak with the authority derived from experience. Sooner or later the world will arrive at much the same conclusions held by the Indian leader, although it seems determined to take the long path, the difficult path, to that goal.

FORESHADOWING A CHANGE?

IN THESE COLUMNS YESTERDAY WE noted Mr. Dean Acheson's warning to the members of the National Foreign Trade Council in New York that the United States had reached a stage when the imbalance of the nation's export and import business would have to be corrected. We suggested, of course, that while there was not much specifically new in his implied admonition to those most interested in the development of international trade and its manifold benefits, the thesis he propounded obviously was born of his detection of the serious impact of existing world conditions upon the international economic structure.

Students of the kaleidoscopic scene in Europe no doubt have digested the basic arguments which Mr. Paul Hoffman advanced in his speech in Paris the other day. As the "Marshall Plan" administrator, recognizing the political difficulties which had to be surmounted in his own country for the establishment and continuance of this aid, it was understandable that he should have employed the plainest possible language. But there will be a difference of opinion in several chancelleries as to how he could reconcile his injunction to the Western Europeans to demonstrate "accomplishment" by the "actual removal" of trade barriers, with the traditional policies of the United States of imposing duties on imports from foreign lands on the basis of "all the traffic will bear." The main point of Mr. Acheson's address in New York on Wednesday, however, must be taken as a reflection on the part of the present administration in Washington of its official change of view in this regard—just as Mr. Hoffman spoke in the French capital with presidential approval. In his address in Paris, moreover, the "Marshall Plan" administrator enjoined the Western Europeans to eschew any return to economic nationalism and couple with that decision a species of integration that would include a substantial relinquishment of sovereignty.

Here again is a refreshing recognition on the part of another of our friendly neighbor's spokesmen that the gospel expounded by the late Wendell Willkie as long ago as April, 1944, has acquired potent authority in the light of the events which that great American envisioned as the result of the Second World War—then awaiting the landing on the Normandy beaches. In his article in "Foreign Affairs" of the date to which we have referred Mr. Willkie wrote in part:

I believe that if we are to avoid the same disastrous cycle when the present war in Europe and Asia has been won we shall have to give up the idea that sovereignty is something simply to be conserved, like the talent which was laid away in the earth in the biblical parable, and accept the idea that it is an active force to be used. I want to see our government and people use the sovereign power of the United States in partnership with the sovereign power of other peace-loving nations to create and operate an international organization which will give better protection to the rights of all nations, on a wider political, economic and social basis, than has ever yet been attempted in history.

Only a week or so after that article was published in the early spring of 1944 Mr. Willkie went down to Wisconsin, a section of the Union noted for its economic and political isolationism, in a bid for support for nomination as presidential candidate of the Republican Party in that year's election. To use a baseball colloquialism, he did not get to first base; he apparently was more than five years ahead of his time. So the man who delivered hundreds of speeches in support of his country's joining the First League of Nations did not live to learn of a gradual national awakening in respect of those fundamental policies upon which the world must depend if, to quote Mr. Acheson, the structure which "we have been building can have a solid economic base," and give that "protection to the rights of all nations," which he who dared to be a Daniel in Wisconsin advocated.

SCREENING THE FILMS

ACCORDING TO A NEWS REPORT, Czechoslovakian government censors have clamped down on American films, and movie-goers in that country, who, we are told, "line up for hours at the chance of seeing a Hollywood production," are going to be disappointed. The reason for the ban on all but a few of the United States movies is ideological. The Czechs will be permitted to see only those pictures which "measure up to the standards of the people's democracy, with the aims of building socialism (communism)."

This would seem likely to reduce the importations to a negligible trickle, and it must be admitted that in many cases the loss will be small. Hollywood has sacrificed quality to quantity far too often. But the actual viewing of any given picture seems of lesser moment than the conditions under which attendance takes place. When only ideas acceptable to a state bureau may be publicized on the screen—and we refer here to political matters rather than questions of decency—it is obvious that the population has had taken from it the right of mankind to learn all sides of a proposition and then form a decision on its merits. Hand-picked, propaganda-crammed movies will cease to be entertainment and will become lectures in toing the government's ideological line. And it will be surprising if the Czechs do not react much as we would—by staying away in droves.

SAD READING

ONE WONDERS HOW THE MEN OF the Kremlin feel as, one after another, the great labor organizations of this continent make it clear that they want no Communist domination in their affairs. The Canadian Congress of Labor and the Trades and Labor Congress in this country, and the A.F.L. and the C.I.O. in the United States, have undergone a self-administered house-cleaning that has resulted in the discrediting of Communist agents. Some unions, such as the Canadian Seamen's Union in Canada, have been relieved of their membership in the senior organization. In the country to the south, the latest development is the C.I.O.'s expulsion of the left-wing United Electrical Workers, whose Canadian counterpart also received attention a few weeks ago. Mr. Philip Murray, the president of the C.I.O., made the official position clear when he declared last Wednesday: "There is no room within the C.I.O. for Communists."

These reports must be sorry reading as they make their way back to Moscow. The dupes who have played the Russian game by trying to get control of Canadian and American unions are now finding that they have backed the wrong horse. They are discovering that Canadian and American workers prefer Canadian and American customs and procedures to the Soviet variety. They must mark up defeats all along the line, for the working men and women of these two countries made their attitude plain once the issue came out into the open. It is an attitude that must be difficult for the Moscow clique to understand—and even more difficult for the Russian people to fathom, if they were ever permitted to hear about it.

TO SWING ON A STAR

FOR ADULTS WHO ALLOW THEM- selves time to stare at the night heavens, the stars continue to hold an inspirational wonder. But to the child, permitted to stay up late to gaze at the twinkling pinpoints of light, a freshness is added to wonderment. For him imagination is little confined by limiting conventions. As he looks to the skies, his face, small and pale, mirrors his identification with the orbs that dust the darkened fields of space.

He weaves his own fancies about the familiar patterns of Orion's Belt, the Big Dipper; and no one may know what visions of an Arctic world he draws from sight of the North Star, carefully traced from the Pointers which direct his eyes to it.

Small, childish questions suggest the thoughts that stir in his mind. But only he can feel the inner sense of belonging to the universe he views. Only he can fix his acceptance of the infinite and his faith in his own place in it.

A Glade Near Taylor Beach, Melchosa

Forest Quiet

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

ONE of the knotty problems likely to be encountered at next week's meeting of the British American and French foreign ministers in Paris revolves about Marshall Plan chief Paul Hoffman's call for economic integration of Europe.

Hoffman sprang a sensation last Monday when he placed his sweeping proposal before the Paris council of 18 cabinet ministers which governs the organization of European economic co-operation. He declared he wanted nothing less than the abolition of trade quotas, exchange restrictions and tariffs.

SINGLE UNIT

He went further. He made it clear that it might be hard to get more funds from the United States Congress unless the Marshall Plan countries showed more willingness to join a single economic unit.

Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, took mild issue with this proposal in addressing the council. He said Britain was trying to combine her responsibilities and interests as a leading member of the sterling area and the British Commonwealth, with support for the development of unity in Europe.

Sir Stafford added that Britain couldn't integrate her economy into that of Europe in any way that would conflict with these other responsibilities.

ALOOFNESS

Well, the British attitude set speculation going. The feeling among many observers in Washington is that London is far from entering wholeheartedly into any such sweeping program as Hoffman calls for. Some profess to see a policy of aloofness. In view of this I asked an authoritative British source to explain London's position. What I got was mainly an amplification of Sir Stafford's statement in Paris.

The sum and substance of all this, I take it, is that the concrete proposals for economic integration of western Europe will have to be made before the specific British intentions will be known. The way matters now stand it seems plain that Britain intends to go cautiously in this matter.

One Big Holiday

Over 50 workers of the Galat Packing Co. of Akron, Ohio, came back from a strike to a new contract entitling them to take, in addition to seven other paid holidays annually, a paid day off on their birthday anniversaries.

What puzzles us is why they stopped at birthday holidays. Had they run out of ideas? What about paid holidays on wedding anniversaries, on World Series day, on the day to pay income tax, on the day for washing the dog.

In fact, why don't they stop fooling around with the problem and call off work entirely so they can devote themselves wholeheartedly to leisure.

A WORTHY APPEAL

This letter is written in the hope that it may be read by some retired man or woman, or others who have a car, and who would be willing to give about three hours time on Wednesday afternoons assisting those who, through accident or other causes, are totally blind, or so near total blindness that they are accepted as registered members of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Every Wednesday the White Cane Club of Victoria meets at Prince Robert House from 2 to 4 p.m. with an average attendance of 55; sometimes the meetings are of a social nature, others are addressed by some well known person, and all are made interesting by the program committee, and before the close of each meeting afternoon tea is served.

A number of volunteer ladies and gentlemen now bring these blind people from their homes to Prince Robert House, and take them back again after the meetings, but more volunteers are needed; perhaps someone in the district of Wilkinson Road would bring in a truly wonderful woman, who through a tragic accident, has been so blind for 17 years that, except for the heat, she cannot tell when the sun is shining; perhaps some volunteer would pick up another totally blind in the Gorge Road district.

You will not be asked to contribute one penny to the funds of the club. You will be amazed at the courage and cheerfulness of its members, and you will return to your home realizing, perhaps as never before, what it would mean to you and your family if you suddenly lost your sight. If you will kindly phone, write or call, fullest details will be given.

OUR NAVY

With reference to the commission's report on conditions in the Canadian Navy, it was surely unnecessary to publicize to the world the names of certain officers concerned.

Should not the politicians see to it that more fighting ships are kept in commission, or endeavour to borrow still more ships from the blokes across the water, as if nothing is done about it there will soon be no Navy to "Canadianize."

When one reads that a large number of ratings refused duty (to put it mildly) and that they were merely charged with "alackness" and only "cautioned," it would appear that something is wrong with the maintenance of discipline.

It is encouraging to see that more attention is to be paid to the social life of our sailors, but to go a little further, would it not be possible to install a dance floor in certain ships, and although I know that the mere mention of anything to do with the old Navy is strictly taboo, how about reviving the ancient custom of taking ladies to sea. This would doubtless please all hands and the cook.

I see where our officers are to receive training in the U.S.N., so would it not be advisable to caution these young gentlemen not to return with an over-accentuated American accent, lest it offend the sensitive ears of their shipmates.

The name of one of England's great has been banded about lately, and we have been exhorted to forget him and all his ways, but there will always be a Horatio as there will always be an England. They are both taking an awful beating these days, but, of course, will survive.

It is inconceivable that the spirit of the great Admiral was not hovering over the little R.N. ship on the night of July 29th when she made her epic escape.

Incidentally, these R.N. types did a pretty good job, don't you think, in spite of their aggravating accents?

CHALLENGE TO INVENTOR

In your issue of Tuesday, Nov. 1, your editorial drew attention to the argument of Albert Q. Maisel, as quoted by the Reader's Digest, re cities prosecuting motorists for parking violations.

Would it not be possible for some enterprising inventor to invent a parking meter that would operate so that a motorist putting in a quarter it would emit a key so that the motorist returning to his parked car and using that key he could receive a remittance to the value of the time not used out of his 25c allotment.

This would obviate the need for most of the prosecutions and at the same time fully recompense the cities for the time used in the parking spaces, and give a motorist a chance of doing business or visit his doctor or dentist without having to lose his priority on a waiting line by having to return to his car to put in another nickel.

I take it this would be a boon to many motorists and lessen the need for prosecutions for overparking.

Electronic Umpire

The Times of London. An electronic umpire, it is reported from Chicago, has been invented for the American game of bowling, and experiments are now being made to perfect one for baseball. If it succeeds a myriad honest American fans will feel like hungry lions done out of a prey they look upon as their own. No doubt many an English visitor to the United States has been tactless enough to point out that the game, over which his American host is so lyrical is well known in England and is played on the sands by small children in the summer, and doubtless our idea of baseball is as fantastic as the American vision of the unending solemnities which go on at a place called Lord's, but there seems little doubt that barring the umpire is an integral part of the lore and technique of the trans-Atlantic game. Our own efforts in that direction lack planning and organization; all that we can manage is a little desultory sniping, and, even in the robust atmosphere of the football field, a sudden chorus of booing and an injunction to play the game is about the worst the referee has to expect.

INFLUENCING PEOPLE

Windsor Star
British attempts to win friends and influence people in the United States shouldn't be hampered in the least by the decision to spend several million dollars in publicity. There's nothing like spending money on people to make them happy, even if it's their own money.

GRUMBLE PRIVILEGE

Ottawa Citizen
Mr. Brooke Claxton, Minister of Defence, says the modern Canadian soldier no longer grumbles about his food and clothing. If Mr. Claxton, who has been through the mill himself, is wise, he will throw bully beef or wartime sausage onto the breakfast menu from time to time. A soldier who has nothing to grumble about is unhappy and restless.

FANTASTIC TIME CONSUMER

Ottawa Journal
The proposal of Mr. Stanley Knowles that divorce petitions from Quebec and Newfoundland, which have no divorce courts, be heard by the Exchequer Court instead of by Parliament, makes sense to us. It is simply fantastic that the time of Parliament should be taken up by this unsavory business.

Cheeky But Entertaining

WHILE MANY of our common birds have left on their migration, the Stellar Jay remains in the woods of the lower Island, flashing its gay plumage in quick flight between trees and breaking the silence with its harsh call, "Chack, chack, chack." The species, counterpart of the Blue Jay of other parts of the continent, is confined to the area west of the Rockies reaching from Alaska, where it was first noted by the naturalist whose name it has taken, to California. Larger than the robin, its prevailing color is blue, with black legs and head. Further distinguishing features are its erectile crest and its strongly built beak.

Though common on the outskirts of communities and in unsettled areas, it seldom ventures into the city unless winter's rigors or food shortages drive it to the more congested regions.

The jay is bolder than other local birds. It will take over feeding stations, frequently driving others away until it has satisfied its own appetite. Its tastes are varied, ranging from fruits, berries and nuts to insects, the eggs and young of other birds, mice and similar small animals. Its strong beak enables it to crack open nuts, which are held with one claw while the jay hammers on the shell. One blow of the beak is sufficient to split a mouse's skull.

An entertaining bird, it does relatively little harm, though control is necessary on some occasions, when its numbers grow too large and its misdeeds grow too serious.—A.H.S.G.C.C.

Greatness Ahead

The following are extracts from an address delivered by the Rt. Hon. P. J. Noy-Baker, P.C., M.P., Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations in the United Kingdom government, on the occasion of receiving an honorary degree of Doctor of Law at Queen's University, Kingston, last week:

I AM GLAD to speak of Britain in the Commonwealth, and of Britain and the Commonwealth in world affairs. . . . Any and every Briton believes that this Commonwealth is one of the great glories of our present age. We believe that Britain, Canada and the Commonwealth have still to reach the full stature of their greatness in world affairs.

Let me begin with the British. Some people who don't know us believe that our moral and material power is less today than it was in times gone by.

I wonder why? Have they forgotten already what happened in the summer and fall of 1940? Have they forgotten that all our present troubles—yes, all of them—result from the efforts and the sacrifices which our people made for what, from the start, was in truth humanity's common cause?

WE PAID then, we're paying still, a heavy price for victory in the war. We have still a stern struggle before us, great difficulties to overcome. But we are the same people that we were in 1940. Britain's greatest days lie ahead.

The same is true of Canada. Canada is already a powerful and an honored nation—third in naval power, and third in air power, among the Allies who defeated Hitler in the war; today, after Britain and the United States, the third trading nation in the world. Canadians have a great and a beautiful domain, as large as Europe; they have vast untapped resources; if we look a hundred years ahead, we can see a nation great in numbers, in prosperity and in moral power. Canada's greatest days still lie ahead.

THE SAME is true of the Commonwealth. The Commonwealth has always had its critics. There have always been prophets of woe who believed that dissolution and disaster lay close ahead. In 1649, in Barbados, British settlers first demanded a Parliament of their own. In 1776 we lost America, by trying to govern them from across the ocean. In 1839, Lord Durham, "Radical Jack," having found the temper of the Canadian leaders, persuaded his government at home that Canada must be ruled by ministers responsible to the Canadian Parliament, who would advise the Queen about Canadian affairs.

From that year onwards, it was certain that all the various parts of the Commonwealth would some day rule themselves, and would be sovereign, independent nations.

SOME people thought the Commonwealth would be profoundly changed when India decided to become a republic six months ago. But when the prime ministers of our nations met, they found an answer by which there is common agreement—the problem was solved—solved with vision and with faith. India will become a republic, since her people so desire; India will remain a partner in the Commonwealth; and, in the words of Mr. Churchill, the vital significance and value of the monarchy has been enhanced.

By common agreement, the Commonwealth had proved how flexible it is; how a special problem could be solved by give and take. Indeed, we can now see very clearly how wrong were those who feared self-government overseas. It was self-government which removed the friction from which separation might have come. As the King said to the prime ministers of the Commonwealth: "The Commonwealth is stronger, not weaker, as it fulfils its ancient wisdom of widening the bounds of freedom wherever our people live."

WHAT have Britain, Canada, and the Commonwealth done hitherto, what are they doing, what may they do in future, for the progress of mankind?

First, they won, and they established on an unshakable foundation the personal liberty of every subject of the King. A great Italian scholar, Croce, said that all history in the story of man's struggle to be free. The first great declaration of Human Rights, our Magna Charta, was signed at Runnymede seven centuries ago.

Second, they solved the technique of government by the people through representative parliamentary institutions.

THIRD, they have shown that Empire can become Commonwealth by lawful constitutional process, by the voluntary agreement of all concerned. Canada won her sovereign independence, as Mr. Pearson (Canada's Secretary of State for External Affairs) said, fighting with, and not against Great Britain.

Fourth, they have shown that the winning of sovereign independence by new nations need not lead to bitterness, to misunderstanding, to separation or to conflict. No group of nations in history have lived in so close a friendship as ours; the very idea of war has long been banished from their minds; of their own free accord they limit their sovereignty by the brakes of international co-operation; they know that their vital interests are not in conflict but are common interests which they share.

AND ALL this is not a dead or static thing. It is a burning faith by which our Commonwealth nations live and grow; by which in our generation they have achieved more remarkable results.

In all our countries we are proving that personal freedom must mean not political liberty alone, but economic and social liberty as well.

Reduction Plants To Get Most Of Big Herring Catch

Provincial government authorities said today they have every reason to believe the 1949-50 herring catch will be large.

The season's fishing got off to a fair start about two weeks ago and catches to date have been good for this time of year. Most of the fishing at the present time is off the lower east coast of Vancouver Island, where fish-and will continue until a quota, fixed by the federal government, has been caught.

Then herring-fishermen will probably shift to the west coast of Vancouver Island. There is no quota on the west coast fishery during an experiment to determine the extent to which the fishery may be exploited without serious depletion.

The experiment is expected to take several more years. To date insufficient information is available to be conclusive.

While during the war much of British Columbia's herring pack went into cans to help boost the Allied world's protein supplies, this year, as last, most of the catch is expected to go to the reduction plants. To date small quantities have been canned and some has been used fresh or frozen. It is expected that a small quantity will be salted.

Reduction plants reduce the tiny fish to oil and meal. The oil has numerous uses and some of it is believed to be used in the making of shortenings.

The meal is mainly used in the feeding of stock.

Ole Brude Dies

SEATTLE (AP)—Capt. Ole Martin Brude, 69, of Edmonds, who "proved" his own lifeboat with a "mid-winter" trip across the Atlantic in 1904, died Thursday. Brude's Atlantic crossing with three companions was to test an odd, egg-shaped 18-foot lifeboat which he had designed in an effort to reduce the loss of life at sea.

His starting point was his home town of Aalesund, Norway, and last spring he was brought back to Aalesund's 100th birthday celebration as honored guest and made a lifetime member of the Norwegian Skippers' Association.

May Set Yule Parcel Record

Christmas gift parcels by the thousands are rolling into the Victoria Post Office for shipment to Britain. Lester Small, a clerk in the British and foreign parcels sections, is shown checking parcels under the name of the distributing city in Britain, to which the parcels are destined.

Christmas gift parcels for the people overseas have poured into the Victoria post office 28,000 strong to date, with all indications pointing to a record for 1949.

Parcels have been arriving at the rate of 3,000 a day and the tempo is expected to increase as the deadline date of Nov. 15 for mailing of parcels to Britain is reached.

"I think we will break last year's record for the people in the Old Country need the gift parcels and the people over here realize it," said George Russell who is in charge of the forward despatch branch, Friday. "The cheaper rate for gift parcels also helps."

Piles of parcels are placed in sections under the names of all the larger cities in Britain—Southampton, London, Cardiff, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Belfast. These are distributing areas in the Old Country.

MAILING DIRECT

"This year we are mailing direct and not via Montreal," said Mr. Russell, as he explained the use of the British mail hampers which are twice the size of Canadian postal mail bags.

Short And Long-Term Hospital Plans For Province Urged In 600-Page Report

By STAFF REPRESENTATIVE
VANCOUVER—The British Columbia government has been urged to establish a 20-year hospital plan which would include reorganization and expansion of hospitals, establishment of more community clinics and an increase in the number of trainee nurses and doctors and in the number of trained hospital administrators.

In a sweeping, 600-page report, James A. Hamilton, Minneapolis, who, with his associates, carried out a detailed survey of the provincial hospital insurance service, appraised existing conditions and measured needs in B.C. hospitals and came up with practical answers to problems and with methods to fill the needs. It will, if carried out, give this province one of the most comprehensive schemes in Canada.

CAPITAL INVESTMENT
Capital investment cost of the plan would amount to less than $2,000,000 annually, the report estimated, but it will take between $15,000,000 and $36,000,000 before 1951 (when the 20-year scheme would commence) to catch up on developments which were not carried out because of the war.

Mr. Hamilton said the annual capital investment outlay put forth in the report was "much better than you would get in the United States."

Operating costs and future hospital insurance premiums were not included.

The report, made public Friday at a press conference at the Hotel Vancouver, urged that immediate action be taken to increase hospital beds, to step up the number of nurses graduating each year, and to divide the province into six regions for efficiency and economy.

HIGHLIGHTS LISTED

Here are the highlights:
1. B.C. has a shortage of hospital beds which, unless the recommendations of the report are carried out, will total 2,800 beds by 1951 and 8,600 beds by 1971, assuming no beds are added.

It was recommended that 1,100 new beds be added and 1,300 beds be replaced in B.C. hospitals between now and 1951, and that 3,300 beds be added and 5,300 be replaced over the next 22 years.

2. Reorganization of hospitals in an integrated plan of hospitalization so that the present 86 hospitals and 10 clinics will be classified as 59 hospitals and 51 clinics.

The report proposed this "because it would do a very effective job more economically."

The scheme would include expansion of eight hospitals and three clinics in the lower Vancouver Island area, and expansion of nine hospitals and establishment of five new ones in the lower mainland area.

3. Handling of chronic cases separately with hospital insurance to cover payments for short stays in hospitals by chronic sufferers, and a system of visiting housekeepers for custodial care.

CHRONICS ARE PROBLEM
Mr. Hamilton said chronics constitute the greatest health and welfare problem in B.C. because of the large proportion of aged people.

J. A. HAMILTON

He urged that older people with chronic troubles be given care as soon as possible so they would not need custodial care later.

3. A program of recruitment, with government financial support, of young women to attract them to nursing was advocated, together with expansion and improvement of the school of nursing at the University of British Columbia and provision for scholarships for trainee nurses at the start of their courses.

If the shortage of nurses is to be corrected sufficiently to dovetail with the proposed expansion of hospitals, 29 per cent of female high school graduates must start training as nurses annually. At present about 20 per cent become student nurses, Mr. Hamilton pointed out.

ENOUGH DOCTORS

4. The investigators found no real shortage of doctors in the province, and were of the opinion a graduating class of 50 physicians annually from the new U.B.C. medical school, plus immigration of doctors from outside the province, should meet needs for the next 22 years.

Included in this section of the Hamilton report was a not-to-detailed proposal that a dental school be established at the University of British Columbia in conjunction with the medical school.

5. It was estimated that only nine of the 86 hospital administrators in the province were as fully trained as they should be.

Mr. Hamilton said it would be necessary to have properly trained men as administrators if the 20-year improvement scheme was to be successful. He proposed a course be set up on apprenticeship and theoretical basis between Vancouver General Hospital and U.B.C., but thought Royal Jubilee Hospital, Victoria, St. Paul's Vancouver, and Royal Columbian, New Westminster, should also get into the plan.

In addition, it was suggested institutes for courses of the refresher type to keep administrators abreast of developments be established.

Another suggestion put forth by Mr. Hamilton was that the government should make recommendations to boards of directors of hospitals as to the most suitable administrator to hire. Final decision would remain with individual boards, but the technical knowledge of government hospital experts could be used.

SIX REGIONS

6. To ensure adequate hospital service and at the same time to avoid duplication of services, it was advocated that the province be divided into six regions, some of which should be sub-divided into two or three areas.

Regions would be: Vancouver and New Westminster region (which would take in northern Vancouver Island, the mainland to Ocean Falls); Victoria region (taking in Vancouver Island as far north as Campbell River); Prince Rupert region; Prince George region (most of northern B.C.); Kamloops region (including the Okanagan, Golden and Revelstoke); Nelson region (Arrow Lakes and east and west Kootenay area).

A large section of relatively uninhabited territory east of the Alaskan panhandle has been excluded, since it was felt people there would naturally tend to go to Alaskan cities like Juneau and Anchorage for treatment.

7. It was proposed that there be a single teaching school for doctors in the province, and that it be at Vancouver General Hospital and work in conjunction with the U.B.C. medical school.

8. The report suggests the establishment of four types of hospitals: The base hospital in metropolitan area; the regional hospital, with about 200 beds and some resident physicians and specialists, for urban areas; the community hospital with less than 50 beds; and the community clinic with a few beds for emergency cases and with medical, dental and diagnostic facilities.

QUALITY 'PRETTY GOOD'

9. Though the quality of hospital service in B.C. was not closely measured or compared with other areas, Mr. Hamilton described it as being "pretty good."

The survey was made as part of the province's agreement with the federal health department and was one of the conditions upon which the Dominion government agreed to assist in the cost of building hospitals.

Provincial Health Minister George S. Pearson said the survey report had accomplished three things: It had given a projected estimate as to how many hospital beds will be required by 1951 and by 1971 and has laid down a plan as to how these requirements can best be made; it has estimated what personnel will be needed and how they should be trained to staff adequately the hospitals of the province; and it has resulted in great value being obtained from the various management studies carried out in conjunction with investigations.

There was no estimate of operating costs of the proposed scheme.

Mr. Hamilton said its effect on compulsory hospital insurance premiums could not be determined, as it was dependent on a number of outside factors which could affect costs. He added that such considerations were outside his scope in the survey, and setting of premiums was up to the government.

Among special features of this province noted during the survey which Mr. Hamilton mentioned was the fact that British Columbia has an average birth rate of 20.8 annually per 1,000 population as compared to the 25.1 over-all average for Canada, and at the same time an average death rate of 10.3 in B.C. as compared to 9.6 for the nation. He attributed this to the immigration of retired people to the province because of climatic advantages.

The Hamilton report consists of three volumes, but the third deals with individual hospital management surveys and is confidential.

Campus Groups Protest Article In U.B.C. Paper

VANCOUVER (CP)—A satire on security arrangements made for Prime Minister Nehru's visit to the University of British Columbia has landed Jim Banham, editor of the student newspaper Ubysses on the carpet.

Three campus groups announced Friday they would demand the resignation of Banham and his 12-man editorial board when the Student Council meets Monday. They described the editorial which appeared Thursday in the Ubysses as "an affront to the dignity of the (Indian) Prime Minister."

Protesting are the Engineering Faculty, the International Student Council and Student Political Clubs. Editor Banham also was called before U.B.C. president Norman MacKenzie Friday. What took place in the president's office was not disclosed.

The editorial, titled "Calling All Assassins," poked fun at the search R.C.M.P. officers made of the campus "heli-house, scene of Nehru's appearance." "Unknown to us," the editorial stated, "U.B.C. has become a home for assassins."

Arts Commission Hears Saskatchewan Education Request

REGINA (CP)—Members of the Royal Commission on Arts, Letters and Sciences today were on their way to Toronto after concluding a western tour with a two-day sitting in Regina.

The commission will later tour the Maritime Provinces for about one month. It is expected to submit its final report sometime next fall.

While in Regina, Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, chairman of the commission, decided it was up to Ottawa to decide whether most of a brief prepared by the Saskatchewan Department of Education could be accepted by the commission. He said it was his opinion the provincial government's request to have the federal government assume responsibility for education was outside the commission's territory.

W. S. Lloyd, Saskatchewan education minister, who presented the brief, said the basis for his request was the desirability of more equal educational opportunities for Canadian children.

The submission recommended that federal grants for general elementary education in the provinces could be made without infringement on the province's rights.

The brief said the federal government, which is empowered to protect the country's welfare in wartime, should also assume the responsibility in peacetime.

Sidney Service Honors Pioneer

SIDNEY — Glowing tributes were paid to the memory of Alex McDonald, one-time M.L.A. and resident of Sidney, at a memorial service held in St. Paul's United Church and conducted by Rev. E. S. Fleming, minister.

The church was packed to capacity for the dedication of a massive oak pulpit chair in memory of the Sidney pioneer community worker, who died in 1945.

Mr. McDonald was active in the horticultural society, a school board member for more than 21 years, church officer and treasurer, first in the Presbyterian and later in the United Church and Fall Fair Association, in addition to his work in the Legislature.

E. R. Hall, chairman of the memorial committee, told of the plans for perpetuating the memory of Mr. McDonald in the congregation, and Mrs. McDonald, assisted by N. H. Mears, unveiled the chair, built of solid oak.

"On behalf of the officers and members of St. Paul's United Church, I gratefully receive and accept this chair to be dedicated to the memory of an old-time pioneer and faithful member of this congregation," said Mr. Fleming.

P.G.E. Extension Measure Gets First House Reading

OTTAWA (CP) — Railways have at least one thing in common with sports promoters. Both must have good connections if they want to make money.

The fact that the Pacific Great Eastern — British Columbia's provincially-owned railway system—lacks such connections was emphasized Friday in the Commons.

Trouble with the P.G.E. is that it now runs from nowhere to nowhere—starting at Squamish in the southwest corner of the province and ending at Quesnel, right in the middle of the province.

Neither Quesnel nor Squamish has any connection with the main line of any other railway.

However, the Commons took the first steps toward remedying the situation Friday when it gave first reading to a bill authorizing the federal government to help extend the railway to Prince George.

Since Prince George, 83 miles north of Quesnel, is on the main line of the Canadian National Railways, the extension would give the P.G.E. the necessary connections with the rest of Canada.

The bill will authorize federal payment of a $1,245,000 subsidy to assist in building the 83-mile extension.

DIVORCE BILLS

At the night sitting, the Commons, with some protests and some laughter, gave third and final reading on division—with out a formal vote—to 81 divorce bills from Quebec. A total of 29 others were given second reading on division.

Pleasure Still To Be Found By Tourists In Britain

LONDON (CP)—Some like it hot, some cold, but Britain probably is the only country that ever apologized for it.

In a booklet published by British railways tourists are warned not to wince at warm beer. And if the ice water is missing, just take it in stride.

"If your drink isn't full of tinkling ice cubes, remember—some of the British like it that way," the publication says.

"Just because overseas travel isn't quite as de luxe as it used to be is no reason why you can't have a wonderful time. . . . Take things as they come, with understanding and good nature."

The booklet is called, "What No Ice?" and was written by an American for publication in North America.

Prospective visitors are told "you won't find the hearty, well-rounded meals you enjoy at home—on the other hand you certainly won't starve."

The difference between British and North American railways are explained, while ticket offices here are "booking offices," and baggage cars are "luggage vans."

The weakness of British beer and the scarcity of spirits also are mentioned.

"What bluff King Hal would have said about a 10 o'clock closing law, or Falstaff's remarks concerning postwar ale, would not bear repeating. However, the moderate drinker will have no difficulty in obtaining sufficient 'protection from the damp air' or a treat among similarly-minded friends."

Artists' Evening At Arts Centre

An "Artists Evening," first of a series sponsored by the Victoria Arts Centre, will be held next Thursday at 823 Broughton Street.

The sponsors believe this series of meetings will enable artists to get together, display their pictures and discuss each other's work.

At the executive meeting of the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria reports of committees were discussed and exhibitions for the winter season outlined.

The executive set up a standing committee to confer when necessary with City Council, donors, and executors. Named by the president, Dr. Harry Hickman, were E. H. Casper, Mme. R. Archibald and Mrs. A. J. Tullis. The purpose is to find a solution to any difficulties involved in disposal or housing of treasures and allocation of funds for this purpose or funds for buildings or endowments.

The Men's Guild of St. Mary's Church will meet in the Guild Hall next Thursday at 8. Rev. W. Hiltz will speak.

Oyster-Eating In R-Less Months Said Unwise But Not Dangerous

There is still plenty of scientific evidence to support the ancient adage that you should not eat oysters when there is no "R" in the month, although the provincial government has recently taken steps to assure that if you do you won't die of poisoning.

Many persons still seem to hold to the fallacious opinion that it is dangerous to eat oysters during the summer months. Under regulations for the sanitary control of shellfish which came into effect last Oct. 1 the government is trying to assure that oysters and other shellfish sold in the province have been handled in sanitary conditions at all times of the year.

Scientific evidence against oyster eating in the summer months is that the oyster during the summer is spawning and therefore less nutritious and tasty than during the winter months. One fisheries authority said today that the oyster during the months lacking an "R" was less fatty, thin and contained more water.

From September to April, however, the oyster is healthy and fat and makes an excellent food.

Under the new regulations for the sanitary control of the shellfish industry it is illegal for retailers or wholesalers to repack shucked shellfish or to tamper with the original container in any way. The provincial health department which has assumed the role of enforcing these regulations today warned housewives to buy shellfish only packed in sealed containers which carry the certificate number of the grower or packer.

A sanitary inspector now is visiting all shellfish growers and packers to ensure that their plants meet the requirements of new regulations adopted after considerable discussions with representatives of the industry.

Britain In Danger Of Another War, Shaw Declares

LONDON (Reuter) — George Bernard Shaw, who at 93 is still writing plays and having them produced on the London stage, says in the first exclusive article he has written for more than a year that Britain is in grave danger of blundering into another war.

We should now be at war with Russia, he says in an analysis of British foreign policy, were it not for the ability of Prime Minister Stalin, and the death of Stalin would be the worst calamity to be feared just now.

Shaw suggests that opposition leader Winston Churchill—"the first to recognize the eminence of Lenin"—should tell British platform politicians who never speak of Stalin unless they insult him that he is not a "blood-thirsty guttersnipe" but "the mainstay of peace in Europe."

Shaw says all political parties are agreed that Britain will starve unless she produces more by harder work, that there is too much budgeting for leisure by the workers, and that if the Labor Party is defeated at the next general election it will be because of its failure to carry out its promises to lower domestic prices by nationalization.

Of British voters who are "uneducated politically," Shaw says they should know that civilization is impossible without a broad basis of communism, and that "communism cannot develop without a top dressing of private enterprise."

The driver told Constable Bud Godfrey of the B.C. Police Highway Patrol that the accident occurred when the truck's steering mechanism locked on a curve.

Split In Ranks Of Lumber Operators

VANCOUVER (CP)—A split in the ranks of British Columbia lumber operators appeared with the announcement Friday that one of the largest companies has broken away from the operators' "united front" in labor negotiations.

Bloedel, Stewart and Welch Ltd., an independent company employing between 2,500 and 3,000 workers, announced it had resigned from Forest Industrial Relations.

No reason for the break was given by the company.

For the last five years, Forest Industrial Relations has represented all major coast lumber operators in all negotiations with the International Woodworkers of America (I.W.O.).

George Eliot's Mill Gets Flood Shelter

LINCOLN, England (Reuter).—Work has started in Lincolnshire on a flood wall which will prevent the River Trent from destroying the old flour mill commonly believed to be the original of George Eliot's "Mill on the Floss." George Eliot was the pen name of novelist Marian Evans.

The aim of the wall is to safeguard the village of Morton—part of a larger scheme to prevent a repetition of the disastrous 1947 floods.

Operations have started within a few yards of the mill, which stands at the southern end of the village and is only a stone's throw from Morton Hall. There George Eliot spent a summer gathering material for her famous novel.

As for the family budget: "Make the home the best place to spend evenings in—that's a sure way to help family budgets."

This Week's Story

Octogenarian Spends Busy Day In City, No Idle Moments

By ELIZABETH FORBES

The conversation opened with a slight cough that had almost the effect of a nudge with a sharp elbow; a sigh that was a definite follow-up and the words, "Oh! But I've had a busy day!"

And once started the little old lady waiting at the bus stop with me got right down to a minute-by-minute description of her day's activities.

"I've been on the go since sun-up," she said, with a birdlike look at me out of the corners of her faded blue eyes, "and I'm over eighty. What do you think of that?"

A proper amount of surprise was all that was needed to continue the conversation.

"Made up my mind before I went to bed that I'd be up at 6.30 and I made it, right on the dot. Had breakfast ready before you could say 'Jack Robinson.' Mush for my husband. He always eats mush. Toast and tea for the young boarder I took in come fall. Helps pay the taxes.

"Bird's appetite she has. No meat on her bones and never will be the amount she eats."

The shrewd old eyes gave me a sidelong glance. "You got more sense, dearie, you look as if you eat a hearty breakfast."

"It was my turn to cough—and change the subject."

"Where do you live?" I said quickly.

"Out near Sidney," she answered just as quickly and got right back to her story.

"Half hour after breakfast I was dressed and out on the road waiting for the bus. But I didn't have to take it. A friend picked me up and brought me right into Victoria."

Rummage Sale Fan

"That was eight o'clock this morning, dearie, and no stores open. So I just spent a few minutes in the market at a rummage sale."

The work-scarred old hands patted an old string bag, filled to rumpiness with many parcels. "Got some fine bargains, too."

A scrambling hunt among the parcels produced a corner of bright red material.

"Look at that real silk blouse," she said exultantly. "That's going to dress one of my dolls. Did I tell you I make dolls? That's my hobby."

A bunch of green feathers erupted from another corner of the bag and a rather surprised note crept into the shrill old voice as she pushed them back under cover.

"Don't know why I bought those fancy house slippers." Then she shrugged her thin shoulders philosophically. "Well, as I always say, there's bound to come a use for 'em."

Sees Great-Granddaughter

"Got a bit of fruit for my granddaughter that's in the hospital. Did I tell you I was a great-grandmother, dearie? Baby was born a week ago. A little girl. Quite a business havin' a baby now-a-days. When I was a girl there was no more to it than a cow havin' a calf."

There was a sudden silence broken by a proud sigh. "She's a bonny baby. Favors me folks, just like I thought."

Experienced Hitchhiker

"Oh, I said, 'you're visiting someone on the way home?'"

"Of course not," she said, with a canny grin. "It's a good day for walkin'. I'll go to the end of the Lake Hill line and I'll just start to walk. Someone will come along and pick me up before I've gone far."

A wizened old thumb waved energetically in front of my eyes.

Eat What They Like Children Can Thrive

SWANWICK, Derbyshire, England (CP)—If your little boy or girl decides to eat nothing but ice cream all through one day, don't worry, Dr. Elspeth Grant told a conference of mothers.

"Next day they choose for themselves the other things they need for a healthy diet," Dr. Grant, assistant medical officer of health at Birmingham, said.

"Young children have a great capacity for regulating their own meals. One good way to bring up children is to offer them a buffet of all sorts of healthy foods and let them eat as much as they like of anything they fancy."

There were certain "practical objections" to such a scheme, but it produced healthier children with better appetites.

Fanny Brice Returns Once More With Baby Snooks

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Next week a 58-year-old grandmother will resume her impersonation of a seven-year-old brat.

This sort of thing has been going on since 1912, when Fanny Brice first dreamed up Baby Snooks. It is likely to continue as long as there is breath in the famed comedienne.

Miss Brice seems resigned to a life with "Schnooks," as she calls the radio moppet. I mentioned that her fans would also like to hear some of her wonderful routines of yore.

"How about another show? I hear they're dragging out the Ziegfeld Follies again."

"They would have to drag me back there to do it," she replied. "I would never leave California willingly."

Television? "Maybe yes. But I wouldn't do it the way it's done now. No one can put a different show on every week and keep it good. If I did, I'd rehearse a show carefully, then put it on three or four weeks — the same show every week. That way everybody would see it."

A PARODY

That leaves her with Baby Snooks, who was born in vaudeville in 1912. It started as a parody on a pampered movie child. One night she was forced into entertaining at a party. She did her whole routine in the baby talk she used in the movie baby number and it was a howl.

She did the character off and on for years and in 1937 put it on the radio.

Miss Brice was off the airwaves during last year's radio upheaval. She used the time to block out an autobiography.

LOVES MICKEY

"It's an amazing experience," she said. "It's like being psychoanalyzed. There were days when I felt very sad, and days when I felt very happy."

She promises to tell all in the book, including her feelings about her two husbands.

About Billy Rose, she told me: "He comes out all right in the book. Mainly I say how smart he is."

About Mickey Arnstein: "I thought I would have a lot to say about Mickey. But it just ended up with the fact that I loved him."

ASTRONOMERS MEET

That which is the foundation of modern astro-physics, namely stellar spectra will be discussed at the next meeting of the Victoria Centre, Royal Astronomical Society of Canada. The speaker will be F. T. Naisb; his subject, "The Origin and Interpretation of Stellar Spectra." The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held at the Normal School next Wednesday at 8.

Principals In Cougar Puck Win

Gangling Eddie Mazur pulled one out of the fire for the Victoria Cougars in last night's P.C.H.L. tilt with Tacoma Rockets at the Memorial Arena, when he rapped in the winning goal with only seven seconds left to play to give the locals a 6 to 5 victory. Mazur, centre, is being congratulated in the dressing room by defenceman Eddie Marineau, left, and goalkeeper Jerry Fodey.

Goalkeeper Doug Stevenson of Tacoma Rockets does splits in effort to stop shot by Cougar Bernie Strongman in second period of game, but to no avail. Puck can be seen entering corner of net. It was the seventh goal of the game and Victoria's third. Wingy Johnson, Tacoma forward, is to left of Strongman, with Eddie Mazur of Cougars and Bill Jenkins of Rockets on far boards.

Leafs-Detroit Scrap For First Position

National Hockey League puck-chasers will wield their deadly weapons on four fronts this week-end.

So long as the customers heed league president Clarence Campbell's warning to stay off the ice, the mortality rate on fans should be low. Even if tickets are still at a premium, the players can't afford to alienate too many fans' affections by cracking nogginns with their Chicago Tommy-guns.

But there are enough issues to settle in the four week-end games to guarantee they'll be trying to use their sticks with deadly effect on opposing goalies—and, fair enough, on one another.

One big clash comes at Toronto tonight when the Maple Leafs battle it out with Detroit Red Wings for first place. They're tied now, each with 11 points in eight games. In another Saturday night game, Canadiens will be trying to close up on the co-leaders when they tackle the last-place Boston Bruins at Montreal.

Both Toronto and Detroit also play Sunday night games, Detroit is at home to the fifth place New York Rangers while Toronto meets the fourth-place Black Hawks in Chicago.

MAY NEED PROTECTION

Incidentally, they say around Chicago that the Hawks may issue a football helmet to fan George Grubich, the 33-year-old steelworker whom Kenny Reardon clipped. There's always the chance that the Leafs may try to overtake Canadiens prison-bar publicity by teeing off on the patched Grubich scalp.

The Hawks will be throwing two of the league-leading scorers at Toronto's Turk Broda. Metro Prystal and Doug Bentley, each with 11 points, top all point-collectors, even if Reardon does hold the head-busting lead.

Leafs will be minus only Bob Dawes, the centre injured in their opening game, for their double week-end duty. Dawes is not due to test his bad ankle on the ice until Monday.

The Rangers will travel from Toronto today for their Sunday game at Detroit. New York has been working out at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens since tying the Leafs 3 to 3 there Wednesday night. Rangers coach Lynn Patrick, though not too happy about the long layover between games, nevertheless expressed satisfaction with the improvement in his team.

SAN DIEGO, Calif.—Al Spaulding, Oakland, knocked out Rusty Payne, 179, San Diego (9).

NOW that the arena commission has aired the question of refrigeration at the new Memorial Arena how about some action to improve the lighting for hockey games. Since the building was opened over a month ago the officials have known the lights were bad and before the first Coast League ice engagement promised they would be improved upon. As yet nothing has been done to eliminate the many shadows that dot the ice surface. Over a month ago I was informed by the commissioners that C. T. Hamilton, arena consultant engineer, had assured them he would improve the lighting. It's about time something was done.

IN THE meantime a number of the globes, located high above the surface, have burned out. Yesterday I questioned manager Joe Dutkowski when they would be replaced. "I don't know as we have no way of getting up to change them," he replied. When I asked him about getting the big ladder-truck of the fire department to handle the job he replied: "The fire chief doesn't want any part of it."

BEING a layman the writer is in no position to tell anybody how the arena lighting should be handled but I do know the principle should be the same that holds true for a billiard table. Nobody has to be an expert to realize the present arena lights are not being allowed to flood sufficiently to give an even light. Whether this is due to the make-up of the lights or the fact that they are situated too high off the surface is something for the expert, Mr. Hamilton, to figure out. But let's have some action in the not too distant future.

ATTENDANCE at the first six Coast League hockey games provides the proof. Victorians are hockey conscious. Business manager Fred Hutchinson of the Cougars disclosed that 20,865 paying customers had passed through the doors for a game average of 3,477. Figuring the club's 35 home games at that attendance it means a season total of 121,695. That is well over the total owner Lester Patrick figured he had to draw in order to break even on the first year's operations. And that total could easily be bettered if the Cougars stay right up there in the battle for northern division title.

Mazur's Last-Minute Goal Wins Thriller

Cougars Beat Tacoma To Continue Home Streak; Canucks Here Tonight

Eddie Mazur got a flying start on the remainder of the Victoria Cougars as the most valuable player of the month last night at the Memorial Arena, when he fired the winning goal in the Pacific Coast Hockey League game against Tacoma Rockets with seven seconds of playing time remaining. That goal must have earned "The Spider" a carload of votes as the fans cheered him until the closing horn. Score was 6 to 5.

Cougars continued to draw good support with the paid attendance announced as 3,674. Victoria club goes into action again tonight against Vancouver Canucks. The Cougars edged coach Bill Carse's squad on mainland ice this week in a free-scoring engagement.

Last night's victory kept the Cougars' home win streak alive at five straight. The club now boasts the smart record of six wins in seven starts on its own ice.

The game was a real crowd-pleaser and the type that draws the customers back but it produced little good hockey. Both clubs elected to play stiff defensive hockey with the result the forwards got few opportunities for smooth playing plays.

The Cougars' defence suffered several bad lapses, especially in the second period when the Rockets broke through for two goals in 34 seconds to regain the lead for the third time.

FAST SCORING
During the 60 minutes the lead changed five times to keep the customers continually on the edge of their seats. It was a tough defeat for Tacoma who had fought back to tie the score at 5 to 5 with just over three minutes time remaining.

Victoria scoring was well split up with Mazur, Bernie Strongman, Larry Thibault and Georges Bougie each picking up a pair of points. Thibault was the only member to score two goals and they were a pair set up by his French-Canadian pal Bougie.

Young Eddie Dorohoy celebrated his debut with the Cougars by scoring his first Coast League goal, a pretty individual effort in the second period. The new recruit, sent by the Canadiens displayed some neat stickhandling and a lot of fire.

Smooth Tacoma right-winger Marcel Dheere put on a one-man scoring act by flashing the red light three times. In the second period he fired two goals in 34 seconds and it was his counter at 16:37 of the third period that put Tacoma back in the game. The Rockets' line of Dheere, Doug Adam and Doug Toole was dynamite all night. Between them they earned seven scoring points.

33 to 27. Game was the cleanest played here this season with Victoria's Flori Goegan drawing the only penalty in the second period, a two-minute minor for interference.

Tacoma opened the scoring at 7:28 Ronnie Rowe beating goalie Jerry Fodey with a screened shot from close-in. Mel Reid drew an assist. Centre Bob Weist got it back at 13:47 on a shot from just outside the crease, Joe Evans being credited with an assist. Mel Andrews regained the lead for Tacoma on one of the smartest goals of the night. Doug Milford drew the Victoria defence, then slipped a set-up pass to his teammate.

Grabbing the puck at the blue line and fighting his way in close Dorohoy put the Cougars back on even terms at 6:42 of the second. Dheere followed with his two quickies and it was 4 to 2.

Slipping in behind the Tacoma goal to pick up a loose puck Mazur whipped it over to Strongman and the Cougars' captain flicked it past the surprised Stevenson.

THE SCORE

Third period was only 37 seconds old when Thibault took a pass out from Bougie and hit the net with a backhander. At 16:13 the pair duplicated the play, giving the Cougars a 5 to 4 lead. Dheere's third goal 14 seconds later tied it up and set the stage for Mazur's winning effort. Strongman assisted, on the final score.

Ice capers—In the dressing room after the game Coach Eddie Wares cracked: "Well, boys, that's one-fifth of the schedule completed." Lot of fans didn't realize the Cougars were without defenceman Tom Rockety for the best part of the second period. He suffered a painful bone bruise in blocking a shot with his ankle.

Coach Muzz Patrick didn't strip for the Rockets. "I've got enough players now and intend to run the club from the bench," he said. Big Joey Johns turned in a smart game at defence for Tacoma and deserved a goal on one rink-length rush. Just to add to arena manager Joe Dutkowski's worries the scoring portion of the time clock went haywire just before game time. Larry Thibault was announced as the winner of the first most valuable player competition.

Cy Wallis Mr. Fivepin To Bowling Fraternity

By BILL WALKER

Cy Wallis.

It's odd how that name keeps cropping up week after week at Gibson's Bowladrome. And this past week has been no exception.

All Mr. Wallis did was to bowl over 900 twice, his third such total in two weeks; roll four games of better than 300 and miss a perfect game when the one pin refused to drop in the 10th frame. Not bad for a week's bowling.

The veteran fivepinner hit his first 900 total with Williams' Meat Market in the Mixed Fivepin League with games of 287, 388 and 232 for a 907 figure and lost his perfect game on the 285 score when he blew the 10th frame after nine consecutive strikes.

His second big score came for Red's Service in the Commercial League when he trundled a 922 trio on games of 304, 312 and 306.

Paced by these performances, Williams' won three games to tie Windsor U-Drive for top place in the Mixed League and Red's Service won four points from Stubby's to climb into a third-place tie in the Commercial loop.

FOUR-TEAM RACE

Ideal Barbers lead the latter circuit by virtue of their four-point victory over Coca-Cola and with one week to play in the first round hold a single-point edge over Capital Cleaners. Eagles are tied with Red's two points off the pace. Three teams will qualify for playoff positions.

Harknett Fuel became the first club to grab a post-season playoff berth by taking coasting to first-round honors in the Mixed Tenpin League. The fuel dealers ended the nine-week series with three games in hand over three clubs tied for second spot.

In the Senior Tenpin League, another veteran performer, Andy Palmer, stole the spotlight by recording the season's high single of 257. His three-game total was 621. The league race finds Strathcona Cafe and Toggery Shop locked in a first-place battle with 16 victories and eight defeats. Watson's and Stubby's are tied for third, three games behind.

Fletcher's Men's Wear have forged to the front of the Commercial Tenpin League on the strength of a three-game triumph over Golden Leaf. Last week's co-leaders, Duffy's Cafe, lost one game to Pollard Construction and now trail by one game. Three games further back are Dennis Fish and Shell Oil.

There's a three-team deadlock for second-place in the Ladies' Commercial League in which Tervos appear to have things pretty well in hand. Four games behind Tervos are Olympics, Victors and Has Beens.

Other leaders around the leagues are Chicillas in the Hudson's Bay League; Team No. 4 in the Rotary loop; Ironites in the B.A. Paint circuit; Aces in the Eagles Tenpin League; Hoppers in Evans-Coleman loop; Duds in the Civil Service circuit; Ramblers in the Dockyard League; Naval Vets No. 1 in the Legion League and Phantoms in the New Method League.

ARCADE ALLEYS

Pratt and Lambert took the lead in the Commercial League by knocking off Beavers in three games while Eagles were dropping out of a first-place tie with a two-game defeat at the hands of Argosy Coffee.

Colonist defeated Dominion Meat in three games to move into a runner-up tie with the birdmen and Imperials, the latter taking a pair from Manning Lumber.

United Official Battles League On 'Unfair' Conditions—Loses

The unfair burden of traveling expenses in the Pacific United Football Club was stressed by the club's secretary, monthly meeting of the league in Vancouver this week.

"It is a most unfair set-up," said Faulkner. "In other sports, such as baseball, there is a traveling pool to which all clubs, irrespective of their geographical situation, contribute equally, and this is the way it should be in the Coast League."

League president James Seggie asked why Victoria United was complaining now when only last month they had accepted the amended conditions of the constitution.

Island director Harry Young pointed out that he had attended the meeting of the Victoria United directors at which the league's amended offer was considered, and revealed that the acceptance was made purely as a temporary matter to keep the league going according to schedule, but that it did not represent satisfaction on the part of the island club.

Faulkner then moved that if the Coast League was unwilling to consider the matter of a traveling pool, the Victoria United club should be allowed to keep the whole of its home gates, and pay its own expenses when called upon to fulfil away matches.

Nat Bevis, the Nanaimo representative admitted that his club was facing a deficit in every home game, but he personally was satisfied with the recent arrangement, and seconded an amendment by V. Saltwell, New Westminster, that no change should be made in the travelling expenses conditions.

The discussion revealed that, outside of Callister Park, Athletic Park was the best drawing ground in the league, but even so, the United, owing to the heavy travelling expenses, was unable to do more than meet the actual match charges.

Supply And Demand Keeping Pace In Local Labor Market

Supply and demand for workers in Victoria increased hand-in-hand during the past week with the result that the number of placements made was the highest in more than a month.

This was reported here Friday by C. A. Mudge, manager of National Employment Service Office in his weekly summary.

Mr. Mudge pointed out that because of the increased number of placements this week, there are now fewer jobs available than at any previous time this year.

Ratio of unemployed males to vacancies increased from 9 to 1 to 12 to 1, female ratio jumped slightly to 5 to 1 from 4.3 to 1 a week ago, and the overall ratio is currently 9 to 1 as compared to 7 to 1 last week.

Among jobs listed locally are tailors, compositor, glass beveler and engraver, Hoffman presser, plate-glass installer, sash, door stickerman, bench hands and plasterer. For women, there are positions for a camera girl, junior stenographers, linenscribe machine operator, experienced chocolate dipper, waitresses and the domestic helpers.

Elsewhere in Canada, there are openings for showcard writers, ship draughtsmen, aniline press operator, shingle packer, physiotherapist, jewelry stone setter, furrier, graduate nurses, architects and actuarial students.

Radiographic Group Hears Dr. Bonnell

Dr. F. H. Bonnell, well-known radiologist, lectured before the Victoria Radiographic Society Thursday at the Veterans' Hospital. Dr. Bonnell's lecture concerned the X-ray aspect of the large bowel.

He pointed out many aspects of changes in this region, of great concern to the radiologist, and suggested methods by which technicians could help in obtaining more satisfactory results both for the patients and the doctors.

Victoria Radiographic Society is a branch of the B.C. Society of X-ray Technicians, and was founded in this city six months ago. The officers consist of: President, C. Brown of H.M.C.S. Naden; vice-president, Miss P. Patterson of the Royal Jubilee Hospital; secretary, L. Ludwig of offices of Dr. Bonnell and Dr. Roberts and treasurer, Miss S. Cameron of St. Joseph's Hospital.

These officers, together with selected members of the society, are working in conjunction with the Vancouver society in matters pertaining to the national convention of X-ray technicians to be held in Vancouver next year.

Next month the meeting will be held at St. Joseph's Hospital, when the lecturer will be Dr. I. C. C. Tehaperoff of St. Joseph's Hospital, who will lecture on tomography.

Start Improvements At Colquitz Exchange

The B.C. Telephone Company has started work on the installation of a fifth position of switchboard in the Colquitz exchange building at a cost of more than $4,000.

On order are additional positions of switchboard for Keating, Belmont and Albion.

The Colquitz project is under the supervision of James Cruickshank with Ian Hurst and Victor Spencer assisting.

Edward Vidal, world traveler, who will give a series of illustrated travelogues on the new Y.M.C.A. Fireside Hour program commencing Sunday at 3, has had many interesting experiences during his 10 years of travel throughout the world.

A Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, Mr. Vidal has taken thousands of photographs of the varied peoples and places on the universe. In this way he has obtained a first-hand and lasting knowledge of these people's way of life and at the same time has amassed a valuable collection of arts and crafts and folk music from the distant parts of the globe.

During the recent war, Mr. Vidal sailed to New Zealand as an escort to a group of children being evacuated from the blitzed areas of England. When he returned to England he was assigned to a government entertaining unit touring Britain's war factories.

He then sailed for the Middle East, spending three years as a lecturer to British and Allied forces stationed at isolated outposts in the deserts of Lybia, Transjordan, Iraq, Persia and East Africa. One of his later trips was a 2,000-mile voyage up the Nile River through the Sudan.

NARROW ESCAPES

Thrice during the war Mr. Vidal was in convoys attacked by German submarines and airplanes.

While traveling on a Dutch ship under British convoy in the Mediterranean, he was torpedoed and picked up by an American destroyer.

On another of his trips he was forced to spend the night in the desert with his Arab driver when their car bogged down in the mud. The following day he walked 10 miles to a desert outpost. On another occasion the Walrus aircraft in which he was a passenger was lost temporarily over the Arabian Sea. It finally landed with less than an hour's fuel remaining.

Mr. Vidal is also a professional pianist, many of his compositions having been broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Since his arrival in North America in 1947 Mr. Vidal has lectured at the University of Washington, the University of

Commissioner Says Hospital Report To Be Valuable Guide

Dr. J. M. Hershey, commissioner of the provincial hospital insurance service, said today he was "pleased" with the report of James A. Hamilton and associates which appraised hospital conditions in B.C. and suggested a long-term improvement program.

"We have known for some time that we would have to have the entire matter of hospitals reviewed. This complete, detailed report will be available to us as a guide for future years," the commissioner said.

He added, however, that experience would be the only way to determine how much should be paid to individual hospitals under the hospital insurance plan.

DIFFERENT CONDITIONS

Mr. Hamilton explained that the cost per patient per day varied greatly in different hospitals. He said this was because of different degrees of operating efficiency and effectiveness which could be affected by physical layout and, or, better equipment and more highly-trained staff.

Thus experience will be the guide as to what payments to various hospitals will be.

The Minneapolis consultant pointed out that the B.C. hospital insurance scheme was less than a year old and that it was too early to assess its results.

He could not say if more people were going to hospital solely because of the insurance plan, but said one person in eight goes to hospital annually in the United States and the comparative figure for B.C. in 1948 was estimated at one in six.

A factor in this, Mr. Hamilton stated, was that there is likely a larger proportion of chronic, aged sufferers in British Columbia which has so many retired people.

The program will begin at 8.15.

$300 Damage To Truck

Damage was done to two vehicles in collision in the 400 block of Menzies Street at 12.40 this morning, city police reported. Policemen said an automobile driven east on Menzies by Charles E. Pugh, Hut 8, Gordon Head Camp, collided with a parked truck owned by Reginald and Freda Meeres, 428 Menzies. The truck damage was estimated at $300. Norman Pugh, a passenger in the Pugh car, was taken to Jubilee Hospital by city police to be treated for nose injuries.

RANGE LIGHT OUT

T. E. Morrison, Department of Transport agent here, today advised mariners that the range light on the back pole of Woodward's Island range, Fraser River, will be extinguished on Monday, Nov. 7, due to the pole being renewed. This will be re-established as soon as possible.

A graduate of the University of Edmonton, Dr. W. Carleton Whiteside, F.R.C.S., has been elected a fellow of the International College of Surgeons. A resident of Edmonton, Dr. Whiteside has two sisters residing in the Greater Victoria area, Mrs. A. Menagh of Sidney and Mrs. S. M. Vallis, Colwood.

Must Inaugurate Campaign To Recruit Nurses In B.C.

If the patients who will occupy the 3,300 beds which must be replaced and the 5,300 new beds which must be set up in this province by 1971 want to receive proper attention, British Columbia must have an intensive recruiting campaign to attract young women to the nursing profession.

This was brought out Friday in the Hamilton report on hospital conditions in B.C. by James A. Hamilton, Minneapolis, who suggested a government-financed scheme should be inaugurated which would involve going into high schools to interest girls in nursing, and establishment of scholarships for students beginning nursing training.

OUTLINES SHORTAGE

Though most people well know of the shortage of nurses, Mr. Hamilton outlined it in three sections—for professional graduates, non-professional trained nursing technicians, known as "practical nurses," and mental hospital graduates.

The survey by Mr. Hamilton and associates found a shortage of 1,044 nurses at the present time in B.C., mostly in the outer parts. By 1951, it is estimated this shortage will be 2,300 and 5,200 by 1971 if nothing is done to recruit more trainees.

It was recommended that 630 trainees should be admitted annually to nursing schools in order to turn out 600 graduates each year until 1951, and this figure should be increased to 700 between 1951 and 1955 in order to graduate 635 nurses annually.

PRACTICAL NURSES

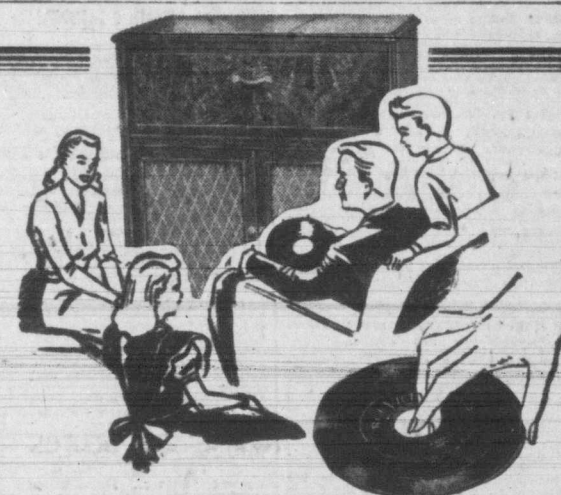

For practical nurses, 250 should be started training in order to have 200 complete the course annually at the present time and by 1956, 350 should be admitted annually to give 275 graduates. This year only 60 began training and 36 graduated.

B.C., with 361 mental hospital graduates at the present time, is short 493 nurses in this category. Unless 280 are admitted annually, to give 200 graduates, the shortage will have mushroomed to 1,300 by 1971. This year, 200 trainees were admitted and 140 graduated.

Mr. Hamilton said he would be against an increase in pay to nurses in training, and added that he would not be surprised to see eventually a nursing school where trainees paid tuition fees.

He noted that 250 graduate nurses leave this province each year, adding to the shortage.

One suggestion the Minneapolis industrial investigator made was that the nursing school at the University of British Columbia be improved and expanded.

THE STORY: Mrs. Everson, a wealthy woman, believes that an atomic war which will mean the end of the world is impending. She has equipped two giant trailers with all the comforts of civilization and is fleeing to "a place of safety," which she alone knows. Among her servants are Mrs. Margaret Malone, a widow who replaced a cook who left Mrs. Everson along the road; Rudy, a disgraced movie star who is the chauffeur, and Victor, a well educated young Filipino. Also in the party is the Marchese Dellacasa, an exiled nobleman who is Mrs. Everson's companion. Twice Mrs. Malone has decided to run away, but twice she has decided to remain, once persuaded by the Marchese, and now by the discovery that she, too, is afraid of The Bomb and that the trailer caravan offers refuge.

IT WASN'T TRUE, what Rudy insinuated that the Marchese was a pretentious nobody. Mrs. Malone listened in, when she could, on his amazing reminiscences, and discovered that, far from boasting of the hospitality of monarchs, potentates and viceroys, he considered their friendship due his rank.

He had taken in his stride coronations, durbars, manoeuvres and consistories. In fact, he seemed to have sat in, as guest, at all the glitter and splendor of the international pageant—the great spectacle of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries.

In his heyday, she learned, the Marchese had owned three houses: one in London, another at Cap Ferat, a third at Fiesole. The house in London was now a hole in the ground. The villa at Cap Ferat had been shelled to powder. And the Renaissance palace had taken a direct hit during the siege of Florence.

The Marchese belonged now to Mrs. Everson. It was his job to teach her manners, to feed her the double-talk of the drawing room, to show her, if he could, how to behave with servants, diplomats, petty officials or trades people, and how to speak French without sounding like a schoolgirl. The Oklahoma waitress who had married the old man took it all in, too, soaked it up like a post office blotter.

MARCHESE EXPLAINS

"If the world's going to be blown up any minute," Mrs. Malone said, to the Marchese, the second morning at breakfast, "what's the use of knowing how to introduce a countess to a duke or a Prime Minister to a Secretary of State?"

The Marchese smiled.

"It will start all over again," he explained. "Suppose, for example, there are 10 or 15 groups of survivors in the United States. Sooner or later they will come together and establish a government, then a system of precedence, and finally a society. It is just as well to be prepared."

"What good's Mrs. Everson's money? It won't buy anything."

"But her jewels will," the Marchese said. "Barter, my dear Malone! Consider the Black Market in Europe after the war. Then multiply it by 10,000 and you will have some idea of our superior position after the dust settles and the mountains cool off..."

He smiled again.

"The possibility enchants me," he said. "You see, I am a congenital Tory. The decline of the aristocracy saddened me profoundly because I found their way of life both picturesque and essentially workable. The knights and ladies, the great houses, the pageantry and tradition, I believe the middle classes like it, too. They were happy—serving the privileged than they ever have been on the dole. But then..."

ALL IS SETTLED

"The malcontents and the envious have never realized that if the wealth of the world were divided up between every man, woman and child, no one would have enough for an ermine coat," he went on.

"And so the trappers and furrers would be out of jobs. Also no one would have enough for jewels; and so the miners, goldsmiths, designers and jewel merchants would all go down—and the architects, too, since no one could build a fine house. And the dressmakers, since aprons would be the standard of chic.

"But you, follow me! It is perhaps just as well that the end is coming. One great explosion and the matter is settled... at least temporarily."

EARTH SMELT GOOD

It seemed to Mrs. Malone that never had the world been more beautiful than now. The nights, especially, when the trailers drew off the road and parked, and the silence came light-footed out of the dark. Never had the sky so swarmed with stars—a vast canopy of powdered ice, the Milky Way, the immense, round planets, blue Sirius, ruddy Mars, the Bear, the Dipper...

After dinner she walked along the paved road, letting the marvel of existence flow through her consciousness. How wonderful the stars! How wonderful the dark! How wonderful the earth smells brought on short puffs of warm wind across the plain! In the distance the lonely aerial beacons flashed red, flashed white, guiding the swift transport planes that shot like projectiles across the continent.

Occasionally the headlights of a car approached, blazed and passed, the red tail lights diminishing, vanishing... One great explosion!

REMEMBRANCE DAY

Mrs. S. F. Leech, pictured here by Irving Strickland, has been invited by the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L. to lay a wreath on the cenotaph in Remembrance Day ceremonies, on behalf of all bereaved mothers of Greater Victoria. Mrs. Leech's older son, Frank, Royal Canadian Air Force, was killed in a crash overseas in 1944; a young son Bill was a member of the Merchant Marine during the war and a daughter, Muriel, was with the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) Mr. Leech was overseas with the Canadian services in the First World War.

Limehouse Slums First Made Attlee See Red

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

HEAD OF ONE OF THE MOST discussed governments in the world, Clement Attlee, is the subject of an interesting and authoritative biography by Roy Jenkins, Mr. Attlee, An Interim Biography, published by Heinemann and recently arrived at the Victoria Public Library.

The study traces Attlee's career from his birth into an English middle class family—background, Oxford, his work in one of London's worst slum areas, war service and political life, which culminated so brilliantly in his accession to the prime ministership of Great Britain in the Labor landslide of July, 1945.

Mr. Attlee emerges a more human and warmer figure from the pen of Mr. Jenkins, than he has ever appeared in newspaper articles and news photographs. That is not to say, however, that the biography touches on his private life. It is concerned only with a recital of facts, which will give readers a view of the Prime Minister's past political career and the birth of his interest in socialism.

Became Reformer

A COMFORTABLE MIDDLE-class existence and leisurely work at the Bar, all without too much purpose, came to an abrupt end one night in 1905, when he paid a visit to Halleybury House in Limehouse, "the heart of the East-end and centre of London's greatest slum area."

The settlement was supported by financial contributions of members of Attlee's old school and existed for the primary purpose of running a boys' club. He became actively interested in the work, taking over the management in 1907 and made his home in Stepney for 15 years. He came to know the people in the area, how they lived and was drawn into the wider social and political life of the neighborhood.

"By the end of 1907, he was a Socialist in the very practical sense that he wished to devote his life to the improvement of working class conditions," writes Mr. Jenkins.

At that time he was not out to change the social order, he adds. It was the individual, not society he hoped to reform. He became the first Labor mayor of the borough of Stepney and in 1922 won on the Labor ticket in Limehouse, which he has represented in the House of Commons ever since.

"In 1922 Parliament was the first in which middle-class Socialists worked with the trades unionists in a coherent party group," the author said.

RAMSAY MACDONALD WAS chosen as party leader and Attlee became one of his two parliamentary private secretaries. He was in the government during the two brief Labor regimes of 1924 and 1929.

When Mr. Attlee came to power, the fortunes of the Labor Party were at a low ebb and in 1932 he said, his objective was to create a Labor Party, "backed by thinking people, fool-proof, newspaper-proof and wireless-proof."

He is described as being careful of the "logical coherence of his speeches, distrustful of the obvious slogan and possessed of no unusual gift of fluency." Building up a reputation for sound statesmanship when he was leader of the opposition, Mr. Jenkins contends Attlee could have hitched "his wagon to the star of Edward's personal popularity" during the abdication crisis. The party, however, had no intention of embarrassing the government of Stanley Baldwin on the issue.

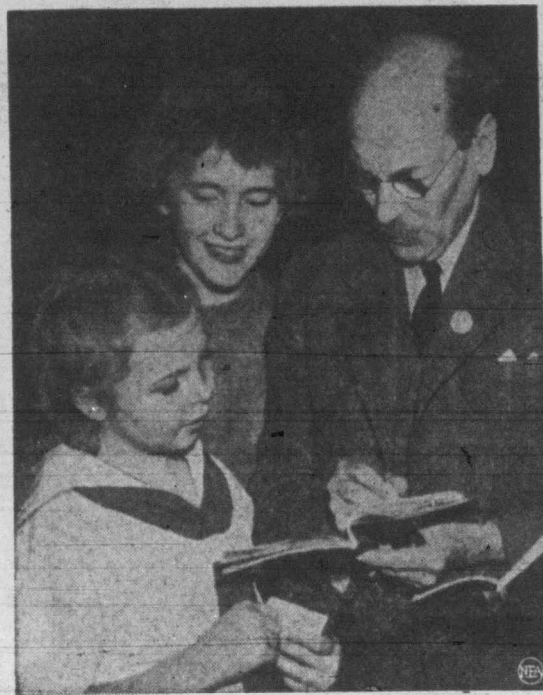

Regard For Churchill

THROUGHOUT THE ABDICATION crisis, Baldwin had far more to fear from Churchill skirmishing on his flank than from Attlee, facing him across the floor of the House," writes Mr. Jenkins.

Referring to Churchill, the author writes of the Coalition cabinet which housed both Conservative and Labor representatives, and tells of the enormous regard held by Attlee for Churchill's leadership.

The many overtures made by Communists and other groups for a popular front with the Labor Party were consistently turned down by Attlee and his stand was vindicated at the polls in 1945, according to the author.

This biography of one of the big men of our day is a timely and absorbing one and will do much to provide readers with an insight into the mind of Mr. Attlee, Prime Minister.

CLEMENT ATLEE signs an autograph album for a young admirer. In Interim Biography, Roy Jenkins paints Britain's Premier as a more human, warmer figure than he is generally painted.

Experiment That Failed

"Time in Ambush," by Isabelle Hughes (Collins).

A POLISHED, SEEMINGLY self-possessed young matron who saw herself at 17, in the person of shy and adoring but ineffectual Gwynne, sets out to fire her with ambition, give her poise and confidence.

She not only fails in her task but almost ruins the girl and her own marriage. Without realizing it, she undertook the project for a variety of reasons, all tied up with her own sense of inadequacy and feeling of insecurity.

Miss Hughes, a young Toronto writer, has done a capable surface job on the not-too-sure-of-where-she-is-going heroine. However, throwing back Ellis' sense of inferiority and insecurity and need to prove herself, on an event in her early teens is not as convincingly handled as it might have been.

Because her husband's people had done so much to give her outward poise, Ellis wanted to prove that she, too, was capable of a transformation in someone else. As further proof that she had come a long way from her shy and frightened adolescence,

ISABELLE HUGHES

Symbol Of Hitler

"Inherit the Night," by Robert Christie (Farrar Straus).

A WELL-KNOWN CANADIAN correspondent, Mr. Christie has created in his central character, a foreigner who is a symbol of Adolf Hitler and other Nazi leaders.

Kurt Warden wanders into a remote Andes village in search of refugees from the world that hates him. He is seeking an even more remote place, a legendary one almost impenetrably sheltered in the great mountains.

He takes with him an aura of evil, of treachery and cruelty. He gets to San Cobar, the place which he seeks in the knowledge that great wealth, peace and happiness are to be found—and that his own skin will be saved. It looks for a while as if he is going to get away with it. But, in the end, he meets powers against which he has no defence.

He is able to bring unhappiness to the people of San Cobar but he works out his own undoing in a most satisfactory way.

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

BY PETER ELIOT

Scott Corrected Proofs As Zero Hour Neared

IT IS NOT surprising that in the dark days of the war, Brigadier Fitzroy MacLean appealed to the instincts of Winston Churchill. By the time Churchill had heard of him he already had a record of unparalleled courage under fire, and, a skilled parachutist, was chosen to drop by parachute into Yugoslavia.

Shortly before this he had met Randolph Churchill—the two had been involved in a serious motor accident—and both were together when the younger Churchill was landed near the partisans in Yugoslavia for the first time.

Like his father, Randolph lacked no bravery, but was rather restless when the plane neared its destination. A glance at his superior officer gave him back his confidence. The Brigadier, an admirable linguist, was correcting the proofs of a Serbo-Croatian grammar which he had written in his spare time!

This is but one of a great many incidents in the life of a brilliant young Scot who has experience as a diplomatist, politician and soldier—he is only thirty-six years of age—told in his fascinating autobiographical parade of achievement, Eastern Approaches, and published by Jonathan Cape.

His Swan Song

MECHANICAL difficulties have often been the cause of amusing incidents in opera.

There's the story about Lohengrin. Once, when Lohengrin was about to embark upon the swan upon which he makes his exit, the swan suddenly developed a burst of speed that left him standing far behind. He quickly recovered his poise, raised a hand to his cheek and shouted to the wings:

"Say, can you tell me when the next swan is due out?"

Nervous Hugo

LIKE MANY famous authors, Victor Hugo was nervous of the public's reception of his new books. He was extremely impatient to know how Les Misérables had been received, and sent a postcard to his publisher which bore the single mark: "?"

His publisher replied: "?"

Shocked Reader

MAURICE DEKBORA, the French writer whose books more often than not have startled the narrow-minded, was hospitalized with an ailment which prevented reading. He arranged with his publisher for an assistant to read the latest books to him. One morning a prim young lady was sent, and as she was reading she approached a disconcerting passage.

She blushed, and, unable to continue, put the book down.

"This was too much for Dekbora."

"Madame," he said, "I cannot rest until I have heard the end of this story. Stop your ears if you will, but you simply must go on reading."

Rebuke Victoria

MIXED GRILL is an unconventional autobiography in the form of anecdotes George Leveson-Gower has remembered in his interesting life. There is that delightful story of Queen Victoria. The Queen had asked a former Maid of Honour to bring her little five-year-old daughter to luncheon. On Her Majesty eating the leg of a quail with her fingers, the child pointed an accusing finger and cried in shocked tones: "Piggy-wiggly! Oh! Piggy-wiggly!"

The Name Stuck

HE HAS a couple of good ones, too, about Tim Healey, the irrepressible Irish Member of the British House of Commons. An M.P., strongly evangelistic in his views, whose name was Massey Massey, made himself ridiculous by protesting against the use of the term "Christmas" as being suggestive of the idolatrous service of the Mass. Asked what name he would substitute, he said "Christ-tide," like "Easter-tide" or "Whitsuntide."

Healey rose and pointed out that the honorable member was inconsistent.

"Let him begin by reforming his own name," he said, "before he meddles with church festivals. He should call himself Mr. Tidy Tidy, instead of Massey Massey."

The name, of course, stuck.

Stepped in Blood

DURING a debate in the House of Commons on the Irish question, Mr. Macdonald, a Law Officer of Scotland, was temporarily in charge of the Government Bench (writes Leveson-Gower) although not personally responsible for the Government's Irish policy. Tim attacked him violently.

"There sits the Rt. Honorable gentleman, who wades ankle-deep in innocent Irish blood."

Bewildered, and indignant, Macdonald rose to ask why such a charge should be brought against him.

"Look at your socks, man, look at your socks!" shouted Tim. They were bright red.

Warlike Crusader

LEVESON-GOWER tells of a Quaker attacked by pirates, while on a ship. The captain thrust a cutlass into his hand and was most indignant when he refused to use it. Presently, whilst the crew were employed repelling an attack on the other side of the ship, the Quaker saw three pirates swarming up a rope on his side of the vessel. He cut the rope, and, as they fell into the sea, exclaimed: "Friends, do ye want that rope? Ye shall have it!"

Diplomat Slipped

BEFORE COMING to Canada as Governor-General, Lord Dufferin was British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, at a time when relations between the two countries were strained, and it was especially important for diplomats to mind their P's and Q's.

The minister's conduct was exemplary until one evening when he was invited to attend the performance of some charades. He became a bit uneasy when a very attractive young woman begged him to assist her as a "mount"—she had to appear riding on a polar bear—but she treacherously assured him that the audience would only consist of a small number of close friends.

So what was his consternation when, he craved on all fours onto the stage with a bear skin and the fair deceiver on his back to find himself in front of some four hundred leading personages of St. Petersburg!

Probes Ghosts of James

"The Ghostly Tales of Henry James," selected by Leon Edel. (Smithers and Bonnell.)

THIS COLLECTION of James' stories with notes and an introduction by Mr. Edel has been "a labor of love," by a young Canadian newspaperman who began digging into the life and work of the famous writer, years before the current revival of interest.

The task was undertaken partly from personal enthusiasm, partly from the scholarly bent he combined with a reporter's curiosity.

From time to time a monograph would appear, or an article in one of the university quarterlies, until Leon Edel's name inevitably began to mean that there was a fresh approach to some aspect of James. It was a turning of the mirror so that James' acts and habits of thought were related to the stories he wrote half a century ago, and a picture composed in the light of a new reflection. The stories in this collection are not ordinary "ghost" stories. For the most part the spirits haunt people rather than places. They are ghosts that come from tears and obsessions.

Edel points out that most of James' ghostly tales were written during a middle period—after he had made a fine critical success as a novelist, but before he had attained popular recognition. At the end of this period "Henry James could step outside the haunted argument of himself; he wanted once again to write of the altogether human order."

"The phantoms were gone; the ghosts had been laid. He was ready to write his last and greatest novel."

Edel, who got his early education in Yorkton, Sask., has been a newspaper man for more than 20 years. While attending McGill he worked for the Montreal Herald and The Star. He joined the New York evening newspaper, PM, in 1942.

Fulton Oursler's Modern Parables

Houdini's Golden Moment

By The Author Of 'The Greatest Story Ever Told'

Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts:

WHAT ARE the prizes of life? Wealth? Fame? Power? No man has ever found true happiness in any of these things. The real rewards of our labors lie in the victories of the heart.

It think this great truth first came home to me at midnight supper in the grille of the old Vaudeville Club, on 46th Street, just off Broadway. My companion, over scrambled eggs and milk, was that mystery master of our time, the famous Houdini. At the witching hour, I happened to ask him a question:

"Houdini, you have known more thrills than any other I know. You have been handcuffed and ankle-cuffed and bound in chains, locked in a box and the box corded with ropes and the whole tossed overboard, into the sea. Yet in five minutes, you rise swimming on the surface, free, with all your chains and cuffs left in the still-closed box, while thousands on the shore stand in wonder and applaud."

"Once, you startled the czar of all the Russias, by escaping from a supposedly impregnable Siberian transport vessel apparently helpless in a straitjacket, you have swung upside-down, a rope around your heels, hanging from a skyscraper, and there and then, high in the air, have made your escape. I am curious to know what is the greatest thrill in all your experience."

Houdini smiled with the expression of one who through hardship and tenderness, had learned the true values of life.

"It was nothing like any of those things you mentioned," he assured me. "Actually, the experience spanned twenty years. When I was very young and very poor I was performing my magic in an empty room in a down-town New York. One afternoon, as I stood outside with the bellyhoo man trying to coax in the customers, a small boy grabbed me by the sleeve."

"Mr. Weiss," he said, "I've got a message for you."

"Call me Houdini," I answered angrily. "What do you want?"

"Your father is dying," said the boy. "Come home at once."

"It took all the money in my pockets to pay for the cab that brought me up town. When I entered the bedroom of our East Side flat, my mother and all my brothers were standing at the bedside, but my father's eyes were turned to the door as I hurried in. When he saw me, he lifted his hand feebly, and reached out toward my mother. "Dear wife," he said, "never worry. Harry will pour gold in your apron."

"Those were his last words. "In the years that followed, I performed in theatres all over the world. I was playing in London when I received a cable from the old Palace Theatre, in New York. To appear at the Palace meant that a vaudevillean had reached the top. The cable offered me a week's engagement, at a thousand dollars. In those days, that was a fortune to me. I sent my answer: "Yes, if you will pay my salary in gold."

"And on the pay day of my first week at the Palace, I received a handful of golden coins. I carried them, tightly in my palm, up to my mother's flat, where I found her in her rocking chair. And I swallowed hard as I said to her: 'Hold out your apron, Mother,' and let the golden shower fall. That was the greatest thrill I ever knew."

In the lives of every one of us, there is the opportunity to make good the faith that others have in us. And to give of our own blessings to others. In such moments, we find the only worthwhile thrills in life.

Faithfully yours, Fulton Oursler

U.S. Musicians Did Not Stand A Chance Behind Iron Curtain

By Audrey St.D. Johnson

FROM TIME TO TIME we hear a great deal concerning the free and richly stimulated expression of the arts under ideologies other than those of the democratic countries. Full government subsidizing of art institutions and gifted individuals is undoubtedly a wonderful thing—if it puts no check-rein on the artist!

Unfortunately in this world we get nothing for nothing; and when the government, any government, takes over or underwrites anything, string, in varying shades of pink appears in great quantities. Art, which has been and should be, a highly individual thing, becomes subject to "policy." In extreme forms of government, policy fetters and blindfolds the artist and prods him ruthlessly along a circumscribed path. The more liberal and moderate the government, of course, the better such schemes work.

Proof of the latter can be had by studying the record of activity in Great Britain under the government-sponsored British Arts Council. Or of the former, by recalling the purge of Russian composers a year or so ago.

Incidentally, the prospectus is at our elbow at the moment and informs us that a marking of 6-10 is classified as "poor," while 11-20 is "good." Mrs. Lundquist's protest, however, got her no redress but the offer of a scholarship at the conservatory. So far as the competition was concerned, she was out and that was that!

Sabotage At Warsaw

NEW EVIDENCE of interference in the supposedly pure realm of art, comes to us this week from the lips of a Pacific Northwest musician who has just returned from a sabotaged attempt to take part in the Fourth International Chopin Competition at Warsaw.

Marie Balagno Lundquist, member of a family well known in local musical circles, flew to Europe in September, her standing as a pianist endorsed by no less than Arthur Rubinstein, who said, after hearing her play the Chopin C Sharp minor Scherzo, that "she played not only like a man, but like two men." Mrs. Lundquist, in an interview published recently in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, described her experience briefly and graphically.

of complete artistic freedom, unlimited rehearsal time, and an orchestra made up of carefully-selected musicians from all over the U.S. and Europe, with in addition, the guarantee that there would be no commercialization of the programs.

Such an offer, costing the company a quarter of a million dollars, has no parallel in modern history. But then, neither has Toscanini.

Met's New Boss

RETIRING THIS YEAR is Edward Johnson, the Canadian-born general manager of the "Met" Opera. Standards have been high during his sway and no doubt will continue so under his successor, Rudolf Ring, whose illustrious association with the first Edinburgh Festival has made him an outstanding figure in the musical world.

One new work, some revivals and some standard repertoire made up the 1949-50 season at the "Met." The new work, new that is to Metropolitanites, is the Moussorgsky opera which was completed after the composer's death by Rimsky-Korsakoff. It is called "Khovanchina" and has been presented only twice before on this continent. The new presentation is to be done in English.

Revivals are "Manon Lescaut," Puccini's opera, "absent for 18 years; one of Verdi's early works, "Simon Boccanegra" and Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah," which was last heard in 1942. Also to be heard are "Faust," "Lohengrin," "Rosenkavalier," "Meistersinger," "Don Giovanni" and "Tosca," all standard but not performed last season.

Rattigan Criticized

Further proof, if any were needed, that even the best playwright's brain-children are not all worthy of their parent, is to be found in critical appraisal of Terence Rattigan's long-short plays now being produced in New York by the Shakespearean actor, Maurice Evans.

The plays are a pair, "The Browning Version" and "Harlequinade," but the author who wrote the smash success, "The Winslow Boy," gets a panning from the Broadway critics for what they term, mediocre stuff. Incidentally, "The Browning Version" won the Ellen Terry prize as the best play in England last season.

The laurels go to Maurice Evans, whom everyone seems surprised to find can be excellent in something that isn't by Shakespeare or Shaw. Edna Best is welcomed back to Broadway in the role opposite Evans in "The Browning Version." Also in the cast and making her first bow to a New York audience, is the 16-year-old daughter of Edna Best and her former husband, Herbert Marshall. Sarah Marshall, after a year in California where she was property girl at the La Jolla Playhouse, has a walk-on role in "Harlequinade."

FOUR THOUSAND FANS who saw Jerry Fodey of the Victoria Cougars in his acrobatic performance against Los Angeles last week at the Memorial Arena can imagine how tame hockey was before 1912-13, when goal keepers had to remain on their skates to play shots. The Patricks changed the rule here and told the goalies to stand on their heads if they thought they could be more effective. Play in the goal mouth now is intensified by this freedom.

Patrick's Changed Rules Revolutionized Hockey

BEFORE WE DRIFT into the doldrums of professional hockey in Victoria let's take a look at several changes in rules which were first revealed to the fans on the ice here.

The first innovation of the Patricks was the numbering of players. Today some people may find it hard to believe that the first teams in any sport to carry numbers on their sweaters made their appearance in Victoria.

The Patricks had often sat as spectators at baseball games and other sports. They bought programs and saw the names of the players but they were never able to tell who was who once the whistle blew and everything was in motion.

They had seen pictures of harriers on the road in Great Britain. They were always numbered. This was necessary owing to the large entry of one hundred or more in an event. It was easy to pick out a man and identify him.

Universally Adopted
WHEN THE Victoria and New Westminster teams took the ice here on Jan. 2, 1911, for the first professional hockey played anywhere in the world on artificial ice, every player was numbered. The programs carried the numbers and the fans quickly identified the players skating away from them even though they could not see their faces.

The significance of numbering players impressed promoters of all kinds of sport and today hockey, baseball, football, rugby and every other kind of player, but parched and chess, wear numbers on their sweaters.

Early in their career as hockey moguls the Patricks decided that hockey must be speeded up and that many of the rules would have to go out the window.

Freedom For Keeper
ONE OF THE RULES that caused them much concern during the first season in 1912 was that governing goalkeepers. It said that a goalie must remain on his feet in playing a shot.

"That's all cock-eyed," Lester said to Frank. "Let's take the 'not' out of the rule and let him do anything he wants."

After a pow-wow on this rule the brothers came up with this rule, which is still in effect today.

A goalkeeper may stop a shot in any way he chooses, except by throwing his stick, but must not pass it forward with his hands but may pass it laterally or backwards with his hands.

In the second season the goalkeepers took advantage of this rule. They became combinations of jumping-jacks, acrobats and tumblers. They rolled on the ice, did the splits, leaped at incoming forwards, caused pile-ups in the goalmouth. In short, they added a dozen more thrills to an already hectic sport.

Introduced Blue Line
DURING THE world series here between Victoria and Quebec in the spring of 1913 Frank Patrick sat in the gallery to observe the play.

In the first five minutes of the opening game Art Ross, who came west to referee the series, blew his whistle 15 times for off-sides.

After the game Frank told Lester they'd have to do something about it.

"It slows up the game too much," he said.

They went to work on the problem and came up with a new innovation, the "blue lines," which are now standard markings on all ice surfaces.

The two blue lines divide the playing surface into three equal parts. The rule when first introduced on Victoria ice in 1913-14 season, permitted the players to make forward passes in the centre zone.

This eliminated whistle-blowing to such an extent and produced more stretches of sustained speed that soon it was decided to permit forward passes in the defending zone.

Later still the forward-pass was sanctioned in the attacking zone and this is what makes the Victoria Cougars of 1924-25 not only world's champions but also one of the greatest hockey machines in the history of the sport.

Allowed To Kick
VICTORIANS also saw more liberties taken with the old rules of hockey when the Patricks introduced a bit of soccer and allowed their players to kick the puck, anywhere but into the net. Previously the play was stopped when a player kicked the puck.

They also introduced the play-offs, now accepted by all hockey leagues and in baseball leagues with the exception of the National and American. The reasoning on this is that a club which is a late starter or is crippled by injuries during the season may find its stride towards the close and the final decision is left open.

A good example of how this rule helped a crippled club was in 1925-26 when the Cougars, badly mauled by mishaps, came through to qualify for third place, and then won the playoffs and a trip east for the world series.

The assist was also placed on the rule books here. It gave the playmaker a chance to get points. Previously only the man who scored got a point, and all the credit. The new rule gave the passer a point and encouraged team play.

Welcomed By League

THE NATIONAL Hockey Association did not take kindly to all these fancy doings of the westerners and refused to alter their rules. Later the National Hockey League was formed and its directors welcomed anything that would put further zip into this fascinating game.

Just as hockey was rolling along famously in Victoria the Great War broke and it was not long before hockey was only a memory.

The Canadian government took over the buildings at the Willows Exhibition and the Arena for military purposes.

The Patricks offered to form a Sportsman's Battalion, modeled on the lines of the one in the east, but there were enough units here at the time and it was suggested that Lester and Frank endeavor to carry on some sports activities. The Vancouver Arena was not commandeered by the authorities so the Victoria franchise was moved to Spokane and this enabled a four-team league with Seattle and Portland, to continue to operate.

When the United States entered the war further inroads were made on player strength and the teams operated with older players and others who had injuries which prevented them from passing medical tests.

Famous Night

WITH THE Armistice the Victoria Arena was released immediately and Lester Patrick returned here to resume operations. He had to set about rebuilding his Aristocrats and this proved to be a slow process.

It was not until 1923 that things began to look up in Victoria hockeydom but during the intervening years there was a night that will never be forgotten by the fans.

It was "Moose Johnson Night," March 4, 1921.

For drama, suspense, exhaustion on the part of both fans and players, excitement and thrills, it was a night that will be remembered to it through the fact this game stands alone. Its like has not been seen since and will not be seen in the future. To use a hackneyed Hollywood word, it was simply "colossal."

Chapter Four By ARCHIE H. WILLS

Moose Johnson was nearing the end of a glittering career in hockey. He had played with the Montreal Wanderers and on coming to this coast he joined the New Westminster Royals. When hockey was revived here at the close of the Great War "Moose" became a Victoria Aristocrat.

Feared No Man

IN HIS EARLY hockey days, he played left wing and had a blazing turn of speed. He feared no man and loved the game so much that he played while suffering from severe injuries. While playing for Victoria his jaw was broken, but he had a mask made to protect his face and played. The only nourishment he could take was liquid, through a straw.

In another game he was hit in the eye with the puck. After a short time in the dressing room he was back in the game. There was a controversy over what player in the league had the most stitches. Bobby Rowe claimed 66, Moose Johnson 60 and Lester Patrick 55.

It was a treat to see the rugged Moose in the dressing room during the intervals of a game. He usually carried a dozen bruises and cuts and said nothing about them. Woe betide the player who came in and began to complain about a small cut or a bruise! The Moose peeled him down to no size at all.

Loose On Rules

THE MOOSE never professed to know much about the rules of hockey. If you asked him what it was all about he'd reply: "There's the puck, and there's the net. The idea is to get the puck in the net."

The Moose did not play on the wing when he came here. Like many of the big forwards he had dropped back to defence.

His style of play was spectacular and how the crowd loved to see him make his terrific lunge and hoist players high into the air. There has never been another puke check like his.

Some players thought he used a stick ten feet long. They said he spliced it. Really, he used the longest stick he could get, about 60 inches. He had powerful wrists and a long arm.

Made Daring Dives

WHEN AN opposing attack was developing the Moose would wiggle around on his skates, figure out the play and as he saw the puck come near him he would lunge. He seemed to reach half way across the rink. No forward could skate around him and some tried to hurdle him. Nine times out of ten, the Moose would poke the puck away, eliminating the attacker via the aerial route. Then he would spring to his feet and flash down the ice after a goal.

Many times the fans held their breath as the Moose made these desperate and dangerous thrusts. Every time he went down he took a chance of being cut by the sharp blades of the forwards.

The fans really loved the big fellow with the protruding jaw and they wanted to honor him so for the first time in hockey history a night was set aside for him. It was "Moose Johnson Night." Since then many players have been honored by similar nights.

Prophetic Story

THE VICTORIA TIMES was prophetic in its story on the afternoon of the game:

"Moose Johnson and his 500 boys are going to have a big time at the Arena tonight and the 3,500 fans who have to part with their shekels for seats and standing room, will be treated to a heap of fun, sport and excitement."

"This will be the biggest night in the history of this city since Victoria played Quebec for the championship of the world about 10 years ago. Seattle and Victoria are billed to play a steller game of hockey, which has considerable importance attached to it through the fact

FACE OFF

The Story Of Victoria's Rise To World Hockey Supremacy

'Moose Johnson Night' Exhausted Players, Fans

"MOOSE" JOHNSON shows his mighty reach. This is what the attacking forwards had to get by when the great Johnson was set to meet them. Often they were catapulted over his hip or shoulder, or his elongated stick poked the puck away.

TODAY JOHNSON'S protruding jaw still looks challenging. He is 64 years of age and works from 7.30 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. on a railroad operating out of Portland, Ore. In a letter this week to the author of this series Moose wrote: "When I retired they retired my long stick too. . . . I enjoyed playing and the only thing I thought of when I put on my skates was to win. . . . You know there have been a lot of 'Moose's' in sport since I received that nickname the first time I played in Victoria with New Westminster in 1912." His real name is Thomas Ernest Johnson.

that if Victoria loses the team will almost surely take the count for any chance of making the playoffs, but even at that the game will have to take second place to the remarkable celebration which has been planned in honor of Moose Johnson, who is doing sensational work to boost the Capital City into the playoffs.

Rush For Briefs

THAT AFTERNOON the "Moose" distributed 500 tickets to boys of Victoria who were to be his guests at the game. The hockey offices on Douglas Street, where Francis' jewelry store now is, were surrounded by boys who wanted tickets.

Joe North was a police commissioner then and the paper said it looked as though they'd have to get him to call out the whole force. When the "Moose" appeared he asked for quiet and he got it. Then he spoke to the boys, and his words won't hurt repeating.

"Now boys I'm going to give you these tickets, but I just want to say a few words while you're quiet, because I know that once I start doling out these things there's going to be a pretty big holler," said the "Moose."

'Play To Win'

YOU BOYS are all young and getting along to the age when you'll be stepping into athletics. You'll not be real boys unless you take part in some kind of sport, for it is the sporting instincts in our race that make us strong, fine men. If you don't play some game you're liable to develop into one of the mummy-pummy boys who are known as sissies. Now when you all jump into a game, don't forget, that above all things, you must go into the game prepared to win. Don't figure that you are beaten before you start or you'll certainly get an awful trimming. Give the best that is in you. Do not be too reckless but don't be afraid to take some chances. And play clean. Don't go out with the deliberate intention of getting some one. Play clean, play the game and play to win."

Place In History
THE TEAMS for this game, which has a place in hockey history, were as follows:

Position	Seattle	Holmes
goal	Fowler	Rowe
defence	C. Loughlin	Rickey
defence	W. Loughlin	Murray
rover	Johnson	Morris
r. wing	Oatman	Foyston
centre	Frederickson	Riley
l. wing	Dunderdale	H. Meeking
utility	Tobin	Walker

The game started out like any other "named" night. They were presentations. As Referee Ion poised the puck over the crossed sticks of the centre ice men, Murray Patrick, then five years old, skated out with a big loving cup and handed it to the Moose.

It was inscribed "Presented to Ernie 'Moose' Johnson by his pals, the Kids of Victoria, B.C."

Then a large man went over the boards and handed a small package to the "Moose." It contained diamond cuff links from the fans of Victoria.

Referee Ion was called to the bench and came back with a large silver cup and presented it to the "Moose." It was from the P.C.H.A.

The "Kewpie Ladies" hockey team had a large kewpie doll for the Moose and a mother made a large birthday cake for him.

Police Commissioner North presented a bouquet to "Mrs. Moose."

Seattle Took Lead

THE GAME WAS not two minutes old before Jim Riley scored for Seattle and another tally by Frank Foyston, on a pass from Riley, put the Mets up two goals at the first interval.

Clem Loughlin picked up a pass from the captain of the Victoria team, Eddie Oatman, and put his side back in the race early in the second period but Riley, who was extremely effective that night, picked an opening and put the Mets in front again by two goals. Victoria came back strongly as the seconds ticked close to the interval and Oatman sank a pass from Frederickson.

Victoria caught fire in the third period and tied up the game and went into the lead on goals by Harry Meeking and Will Loughlin. Victoria tried to protect this lead but a penalty to Dunderdale was costly and Foyston got loose in front of the net and evened up the count. The teams remained tied until close of the period, which meant overtime.

Victoria Custom

THERE WAS nothing unusual about overtime games, not as far as Victoria was concerned in lengthy extra games. In 1914 Victoria won the championship by defeating New Westminster after 36 minutes and 49 seconds of overtime.

On Feb. 21, 1919, Victoria and Vancouver fought for 37 minutes and 20 of extra play before Clem Loughlin scored the winner for the Capitals.

On Feb. 2, 1921, Victoria was involved in another long bout with Seattle on the latter's ice. The game went 31 minutes overtime before Will Loughlin netted the deciding goal for Victoria.

When the teams lined up for the overtime on "Moose Johnson Night" none of the fans was overly concerned. It might go an extra period or two but Victoria had never lost a long one.

Never-Ending Game

THE FIRST 20 minutes passed with Victoria showing brilliant form and only Holmes' uncanny work saved them from scoring.

Another 20-minute extra period started and the fans began to sense the dramatic. Towards the end of the stanza the players began to show signs of tiring, but they had to keep on.

During this interval most of the 500 boys who received passes and should have been home-in bed to be fit for school the next morning, dozed in their seats.

Another 20 minutes began. Soon players when they were body-checked had difficulty in getting on their feet. The play slowed down.

The midnight hour arrived and passed and the teams were still fighting it out.

The fans were fired too but no one went home. It would be a shame for either team to score at this late hour.

The gong sounded for the end of the sixth period of play. An all-time record for hockey. Victoria again was in the history book.

What could be done in such a situation?

Players Exhausted

LESTER PATRICK went to his team's dressing-room and found players in distress. Some were stretched out on the benches exhausted. Others were too tired to release the laces of their shoes.

He went to the Seattle dressing-room and found the condition of the players equally as bad. Some of them complained of being unable to see.

Pete Muldon, the Seattle manager, had not accompanied his team to Victoria for the match and Holmes was in command.

While the fans waited for an announcement, Patrick and Holmes sought a solution. They agreed it would be inhuman to send the players back on the ice and they felt the fans had had enough as well. They'd never forget Moose Johnson Night and why not leave the result as it was.

Fans Satisfied

NO PLAYERS staggered out for another period. The announcement was made that the game would be called and that it should have any bearing on the league standing at the end of the season it would be replayed.

The fans were satisfied. They stumbled away home, tired but fully satisfied that they had been spectators at one of the most gripping games in the history of ice hockey.

In latter years in the National Hockey League two games were played which exceeded the record of six periods established here. They were in playoffs. It must be remembered, too, that the participating clubs stripped many more players than Victoria and Seattle.

Prolonged games extracted a heavy toll of the players. For two weeks after their contest the Victoria and Seattle teams played far below their normal power.

The Patricks, however, had been insistent on all games being played to a finish so that no one could accuse them of calling a game at a certain time and ordering a replay so as to get an extra gate.

Club owners came to realize the money they had invested in players and did not wish to reduce their playing life. They agreed that one period of overtime should be played for league games but that in playoffs or world series the contest should continue until a decision.

Today even with their greater manpower the teams do not play overtime during the regular schedule. If they are tied at the end of the third period each team gets a point. In the playoff or world series they still must play to a decision.

Lives In Portland

MOOSE JOHNSON is now a man of 64 and lives in Portland, Ore., where for many years he has been with a railroad. Many honors came his way in hockey but even when memory dims the "Moose" will never forget the night the Victoria fans honored him.

There are many old-timers here who will proudly tell you that they were in the crowd that night and would play handsomely to see it all over again.

I often wonder where "Moose" Johnson's 500 kids are. Some of them, I know, followed the "Moose's" advice and took up athletics, played clean and played to win. Some went into the biggest game of all, the Fight for Freedom, 1939-1945. For some it was their final fight.

But to all, wherever they are today "Moose Johnson Night" will be a treasured memory.

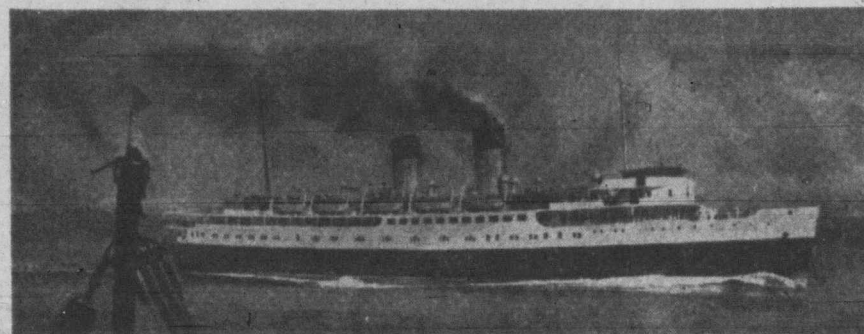

Another chapter of "Face Off" will appear in next Saturday's Magazine Section of the Victoria Times.

A GAME IN Victoria was the cause of blue lines being adopted by hockey. Back in the first world series when Quebec played Victoria in the local arena there was so much whistle blowing for off-sides that the next season the Patricks introduced blue lines, which divided the ice into three equal sections and permitted forward-passing in the centre section. Blue lines are now universally used. The picture above shows the blue line in the new Memorial Arena.

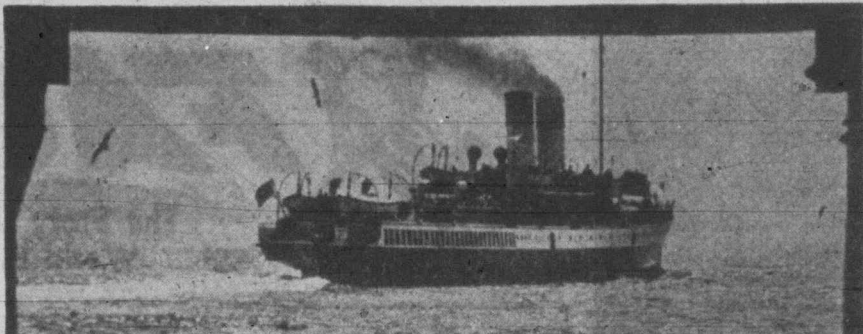

YOU CAN IDENTIFY players from the back today because they have been numbered. The first teams to wear numbers in any sport appeared on Victoria ice on Jan. 2, 1912. Prior to that it was difficult to identify players, particularly visitors. Your program would inform you that the three Victoria players above are, left to right, (5) Flori Googan, defence; (11) Eddie Mauer, and (6) Bernie Strongman, centre. Most sports now number their players.

CLYDE-BUILT IS MORE THAN A TRADE MARK—IT'S SHIPPING HISTORY

PACIFIC PRINCESS—One of the latest products of the Clyde yards, the Canadian Pacific Princess Marguerite, has a proud pedigree that goes back 137 years to Henry Bell's Comet, the first of all steamships.

CLYDE DUCHESS—Although built nearly 40 years ago, the Clyde River steamer Duchess of Argyll still retains the modern look, and she is one of the models from which hundreds of fine coastal passenger vessels have been designed.

First Steamer Patrons Were Co-Voyagers With The Devil

By Harry Young

THE SPEED and comfort of the two new Princesses on our coastal services have brought ample proof that whatever else may have gone wrong in Britain, ships bearing the Clyde-built label are still top-ranking in design and workmanship.

While it is true that the specification for the Marguerite and the Patricia was drawn up by their Canadian owners, and the engines were the work of an English electrical engineering outfit, the two Princesses are in the essentials the direct Clyde descendants of the first power-driven vessel.

This distinction belongs to Henry Bell's Comet, which went into service in 1812. It was no more than an open wooden-hulled craft with a pipelike funnel, an upright boiler and a creaky wheel of a paddle. It provided no cover for its crew or passengers and only wooden planks for seats. Its patrons, too, were deemed fellow-travelers with Old Nick himself, and they lived in terror of being blown to eternity by way of a boiler explosion. But, at least, the Comet was the pioneer.

Plied Same Trade

NOTHING LESS like the two C.P.R. Princesses could be imagined, yet the Comet, apart from being built on the same river, plied a very similar trade. It connected two or more coastal communities in a ferry service. The Comet made the very first steamship route by covering the 20-odd miles from Glasgow to Gourock and did it three times a week—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from Glasgow, and Monday, Wednesday and Friday from Gourock.

The pioneer did not remain long unchallenged. In the following year—1813—the Comet had a rival in the Elizabeth, which incorporated the first of the thousands of improvements that have led, over a 137-year span, to the two Canadian Pacific Princesses. Where the old Elizabeth scored over the Comet was in the provision of a cabin. This was carpeted, had a sofa, sliding windows, curtains, a mirror and a bookshelf.

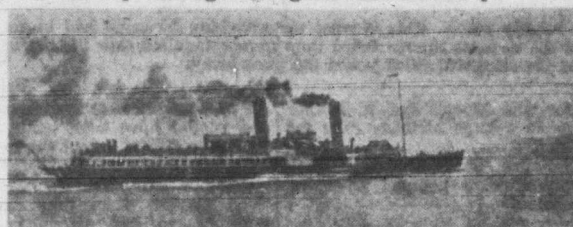

Notable Pioneers

IT IS interesting to note that the pioneer steamship route which served the Firth of Clyde communities has never lost its popularity, and the ships which have plied its trade have always been in the forefront of progress. For instance, it was one of the Clyde steamship firms that ran the first turbine steamer, the King Edward, and more recently the Tallisman was the first ship to be propelled by electrically driven paddles.

This story of Clyde passenger steamer progress was built around private enterprise and keen competition. From 1812 to 1860, the steamers were usually skippered by their owners. The return fare from Glasgow to Rothesay—a distance of about 40 miles each way—was at one time cut as low as sixpence. This did not include an insurance policy, which was a mistake for several vessels came to a steamy end when their over-charged boilers blew out under pressure of steam. The arrival of the safety-valve in 1836 brought this peril to an end, but there were still many adventures left to thrill the Glasgow traveling public.

Craze For Speed

WHEN ABOUT the middle of the 19th century the Scottish railway companies ran their tracks from Glasgow to terminal points on the Firth of Clyde—to save the long sail down-river—the aspect began to change. The railways operated their own lines of packets, and these in competition with the older company boats, set up a craze for speed that thrilled the passengers just as much as the captains and crews.

MOST FAMOUS of all the Clyde paddlers was the Columbia, which carried the Royal mail to the West Highlands. Built in 1878, her stylish lines and luxurious accommodation made her a milestone in shipping design.

It is almost amazing to realize that the rakish old paddlers of almost a hundred years ago covered the water almost as quickly as crack ferry ships do today.

In 1854, two Clyde steamers, the Ruby and the Rothesay Castle, left Glasgow together and raced stem to stern all the way down the narrow Clyde River, and through the broader Firth into Rothesay Bay, covering the 40 miles in under two and a half hours. The same journey today, with the boats obversing the "dead slow" notices in the upper reaches, takes well over three hours.

Captains Fined

BUT THERE WAS no "dead slow" for the captains of the Ruby and the Rothesay Castle. They opened the steam cocks wide, and kept them that way regardless. The ships bumped one another round the sharp bends of the river channel and the sequel was the fining of the two captains for "reckless navigation."

Later the Clyde skippers were forced to observe the common navigation laws, but the elimination of reckless bumping and boring did not stop the more legitimate hot-rodding. The railway companies were forced into the battle of speed by the enthusiasm of their passengers, and those who lost out, lost their customers.

Three-Way Race

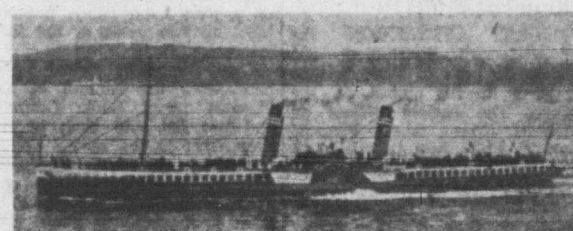

EACH EVENING around four o'clock, the Caledonian, the Glasgow and South Western, and the North British Railway Companies whistled their "business men's boat expresses" out of their Glasgow terminal. The race to take the Glasgow merchants to their summer homes at Dunoon within the hour was on.

The Caledonian express hurried its way from the Central Station down the more or less level south of the river track to Gourock; the Glasgow and South Western took the hilly route over the Renfrewshire Highlands and dropped down a precipitous incline to Greenock; and the North British took the northern route via Dumbarton to Craigendoran.

Hurtled Down Slope

PASSENGERS on the Glasgow and South Western train had the greatest excitement. In order to save precious seconds the brakes were not applied as the train hurtled down the slippery slope to Greenock and at well over 60 miles an hour the light wooden carriages swayed and jolted and threatened to leave the track.

Only when the train whistled into the short final tunnel did the engineer apply his brakes, and then to the sharp shriek of metal meeting metal, the train crazily drew up into the station. Only the buffers and 50 yards of covered way separated the panting engine from the deep water berth where the steamer was lying ready.

LORD OF THE ISLES was another popular paddler of the older Clyde school. Built in 1891, she plied on the Firth until broken up in 1928.

One often wondered what would happen if the engineer applied his brakes one fatal second too late! But neither engineer nor brake ever failed... a miracle if ever there was one.

No Encumbrances

NOTHING heavier than hand baggage was carried on these business men's trains. There was no time for such encumbrance.

Porters shouted "Move quickly down to the boat," and almost before the last passenger was hurried over the gangplank, the captain had swung his telegraph over to "full speed ahead."

And so every evening hundreds of spectators on the shores of the Firth as well as the passengers, would watch with bated breath as the three paddlers, belching forth black smoke, would race one another down the water.

If, in the excitement, the passengers swarmed to one side, putting the ship off an even keel, the captain would think nothing of roaring an admonition from the bridge.

"Trim the ship," he would shout, and the passengers, hanging their heads in shame, would hasten to comply. As the three ships converged on Dunoon pier it was left to the piermaster to make the final decision. From his box at the pierhead he would decide which boat was closest and that boat he would signal for first use of the pier. The defeated rivals might demur at the arbitrary decision, but all their captains could do was to signal "stop" and then "slow astern" to bring his ship to a speedy halt. The winner tied up majestically.

Famous Fliers
THIS ERA of racing reached its peak just before the First World War, and many Scots on this coast will remember nostalgically the names of some of the famous fliers (and others not so fast) who plied the First of Clyde in those halcyon days of unbridled competition.

In the Caledonian fleet the flagship was the squat, well-appointed Duchess of Hamilton. Other Duchesses were those of Rothesay, and Fife. On a lower scale of the peerage were the Marchioness of Lorne, the Marchioness of Bredalbane, and a commoner, the Caledonia. All there were paddlers. In addition the fleet had a new turbine, the Duchess of Argyll—the only one of the fleet still in commission.

Among the Glasgow and South Western fleet were Jupiter, Juno, Mars, Mercury, Minerva, Neptune, and Glen Rosa, all open-funnel paddlers, and the Glen Sannox, which plied the Arran Island route with the turbine Atalanta, was the two-funneled paddler of a line that looked terribly smart with its French grey and white hull and red and black funneling.

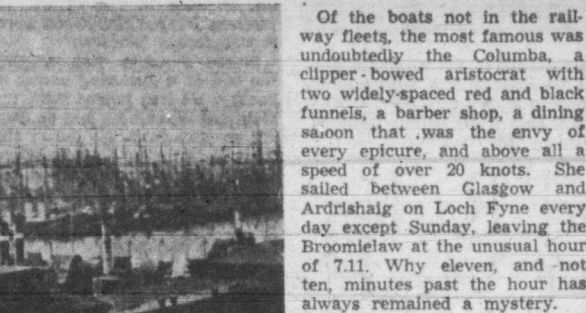

THE NORTH BRITISH boats of the era were named after Scott's novels: Waverley, Red Gauntlet, Danville Dinnmont, Kenilworth, Tallisman, Marmion, and Lucy Ashton. The Lucy Ashton is the lone survivor of two wars and she was the last paddler the writer used before coming to these parts just over a year ago. "The Lucky Ashbin," as she was one time called, is now the Grand Old Lady of the fleet.

In this tree the handsome leaves play an important part in the display of color at all seasons of leafage but perhaps more particularly in winter. The large seven-fingered leaves of this tree give a specially graceful character to the massed foliage and this is still more emphasized by the marked parallel ribbing of each leaflet. This leaf pattern accentuates the dome-like masses of foliage which give a wonderful summer shade and is peculiarly fitted to display the color changes of autumn.

A young copper beech displayed beautifully the bright tan color of its fall leafage, and near by one of our small-leaved or smooth maples exhibited a very delightful yellow. This is the species found by the shore of Cordova Bay and along creeks, a very pretty and dainty species very suitable for garden growth. Close by this tree and in striking contrast was one of the purple-foliated plums frequently met with in gardens; the contrasting colors was particularly striking. A Hawthorn was more noticeable on account of its colors than its size, for its leaves were distinctly divided into two masses, one of greenish yellow, and one of dullish red. A Spanish chestnut showed yellow and green.

Handsome Chestnuts
ONE OF THE MOST brilliant displays of color was that of some horse chestnuts. A pair of these in particular were really magnificent in their display of rich yellow with occasional slight touches of tan and green.

Of the boats not in the railway fleets, the most famous was undoubtedly the Columbia, a clipper-bowed aristocrat with two widely-spaced red and black funnels, a barber shop and a dining saloon that was the envy of every epicure, and above all a speed of over 20 knots. She sailed between Glasgow and Ardrishaig on Loch Fyne every day except Sunday, leaving the Broomielaw at the unusual hour of 7.11. Why eleven, and not ten, minutes past the hour has always remained a mystery.

Rammed U-Boat
OWNED by MacBrayne's, the Columbia carried the Royal Mail to the West Highlands and its successor the Saint Columba did the same. The Saint Columba incidentally is the only Clyde River steamer with three funnels. It was not always thus. It started life as the Queen Alexandra, a two-funneled turbine that ran many years under the black and white colors of the Williamson Turbine Steamers Ltd. During the First World War, which broke up much of the famous Clyde fleet, the Queen Alexandra had the distinction of ramming and sinking a German U-boat while taking a load of soldiers across the English Channel.

In the period between the two wars, the competitive angle in Clyde passenger service lost its edge. The first big blow was the amalgamation of the railways, which divided the Clyde steamers into two ownership groups directed from London. While the new groups built fine new ships, the new owners were far too dignified to enter any competitive bargaining for trade.

Sunk At Dunkerque
THEN CAME the Second World War, and the loss of many more Clyde favorites. Waverley, which at one time vied with Columbia for the paddling speed honors, came to a glorious end in the Dunkerque evacuation. Others were dive-bombed and sunk, but never before they had extorted their full toll of the enemy.

With the war ended there came another phase and probably the final one in a history of sea passenger service that was in at the beginning and is never likely to be equalled. Today all the ships, except the few owned by the MacBrayne's conifers, pines, firs and sequoias, the principal foliage is that of the deciduous trees. In anticipation of their leaf-fall they have taken on those varieties and variations of color in whose flaming glory the winter resting season is introduced.

Among the native trees that in the days of building and garden planning were spared are the Garry oak and the large-leaved maple. The former today was hesitating in its coloring between a sombre green and a yellow; the latter between a clear yellow, a bright tan, with touches of light green.

It must be remembered that in the coloring of leafage at all seasons much depends upon the form of the individual leaves, as this affects light and shade. This, I think, is more noticeable in autumn than in summer.

No Shower For Napoleon

By PAUL GALlico

WELL, I HAVE JUST come from seeing Napoleon's bathroom, and why it should prompt me to write a piece about it, I do not know, but it has, and I have, and this is it, for better or for worse.

We drove out to his house at Fontainebleau, and what I can't get over is the size of Nappie's salle de bain as we call it in this country. Why, looks here, if you were out hunting an apartment, I don't care what your income bracket is, and the landlord or the agent showed you a little hole in the wall with a dinky old zinc tub sitting in it, and hardly enough room to swing a towel to get your back dry, you'd tell him off as to what he could do with it, and his apartment.

Well, so help me, that's all Nappie had, and he was a blooming emperor. One narrow little lead tub, certainly not big enough for me to get into, and I tried, to the evident distress of the guide who was not in sympathy with the true scientific spirit. Half of me made it. He had hot and cold running water all right, because there of the wall with the emperor's eagle perched on top of them, were two faucets coming out but what I say is—what's the good of being an emperor if that's all the bathroom you can have? Why, there wasn't a single bit of chromium anywhere, not so much as a soap dish or a towel rack. And as for a cabinet or a shaving mirror... Perish the thought.

What A House
WHAT WOULD KILL YOU if you saw it is not only the dimensions of this closet where the Great Man used to soak the royal carcass and dictate letters to his secretary, but the size of the house or chateau in which it is located. It's huge. It's enormous. It looks as big as Grand Central and Penn Stations all rolled into one, and probably is. It had been the summer home of the kings and queens of France ever since it was originally built by Francois the I. From the outside it looks bigger than the Public Library in New York at 42nd Street and Fifth Avenue. It takes hours to walk through it.

Boy, what a house. Why, you could have yourself a private swimming pool inside of it, let alone a good-sized bathroom. And then all Nappie has, or had, to be more accurate, was this stuffy hole with the zinc tub. What I say is, what was the use of being Emperor of France and boss of all Europe? Say, wouldn't you like to see the place where Stalin washes? IF!

Why, you, sitting here reading this, have got it all over Napoleon. Your house may not be quite so big, but when you feel like having a bath or a soak, there's the tiled room with the nice, long, porcelain tub waiting for you with the soap-and-grab right in the wall, hot and cold water mixer, fancy chromium drain stopper, chrome and rubber bath tray and a bottle of bath salts.

Not Even Acoustics

THERE'S A STEAM radiator, sizzling warmth and comfort if the weather is cold, a couple of nifty white bathroom chairs for you to sit on when you dry your toes after you come out, a first-class overhead shower dispensing a full stream of water of any temperature from tropic warm to mountain cold, mirrored cabinets, heated towel racks, bathroom scales, every doggone thing a man could want for his washing comfort, including resonance—you know, that sort of echo business that makes your voice sound like Echo Pina's when you sing in the tub. I tried Nappie's. No good for either whistling or singing. Why, that man didn't have anything at all. And, don't forget, he was the Emp.

Of course, they didn't have or know about a lot of our modern comforts in those days, though it wasn't so long ago at that. But wouldn't you think that Nappie, being the boss and everybody having to do what he said and hop to it, would have thought up something better for himself than a too-small tub in a stuffy little two-by-four? Believe me, if I were an emperor today, I'd... Well, we won't go into that, because I'm not going to be.

Excitement Has Gone
TRAINS no longer race one another down to the coastal terminal; boats no longer run neck and neck to catch the signal of the Dunoon piermaster. There is no opposition. The slogan "Glasgow to Dunoon within the hour" is something that belongs to the past. There's an unconcern about speed, the hour journey now takes 80 minutes, and if the boat is late—well, there's no one in authority who cares a rap.

It is perhaps a signal lesson in economics, but to the old-timers it is dreadfully humdrum.

conceal the tall trunks. The ivy and the firs furnish a fine contrast to the reds and yellows of the deciduous trees. The trees on the old Pemberton Estate are a study in themselves. There with our native species grow, for example, the sequoias of California, and if the spreading wave of new buildings does not spell their destruction, they will become in time mighty trees. Meanwhile a host of deciduous saplings has sprung up of late years, threatening the surviving shrubs of the old garden.

I came home by Despard Avenue where the English oaks planted some years ago are interesting because, growing near the native Garry oak, it is easy to compare the two and see the likenesses and differences in leaf, acorn and trunk. Some of these young oaks are already a brownish yellow while others still retain their green. I had almost forgotten to say that in one garden I saw a fine cut-leaf maple in full autumn glory, a brilliant crimson. It was a well-grown specimen apparently ten feet or so high. The structure of the leaf of this maple imparts a certain fine lacy to the foliage which adds to its beauty under autumn coloration.

The birches on Richmond Avenue are partially turned yellow; some of them are still greenish.

But all he would have had to say was that he wished for an apparatus where the water, or sawdust we call it in gay Paree, would fall or tumble onto his noggins the way it does when it rains, and, bingo, somebody would have invented a shower. All they had to do was "bore holes in a barrel, nail it overhead, fill it up and let her rip."

Enough For Nap!
COULD HAVE BEEN Josephine's fault since, after all, she was running the household, and when Nappie became emperor and had the right to use the big joint at Fontainebleau, she probably went down first to look the place over and pick out where they would have their rooms.

She wasn't too sweet a person, you know, or too much impressed with Nappie even after he became emperor. What probably happened was that she went nosing around in the chateau until she came to what looked like an old, disused store-room for luggage—no air, no light, no windows. "Volla!" she said. "This will do for Napoleon's bathroom. Good enough for him."

I also saw Napoleon's hat in a glass case. He might have been a little guy, but he took a big skimmer. But, can you imagine, not so much as a soap dish in the bathroom. I'm not even so sure he had soap...

Rockland Avenue Retains Its Old World Charm

By ROBERT CONNELL

THIS MORNING of one of the last days of October-I took a walk along Rockland Avenue. It was lightly raining, so that there was a silvery gray background to the scenery and its colors. The Avenue is one of the few thoroughfares left in Victoria that can claim a distinctive scenery of its own.

The axe has so far not been laid to the roots of the trees, whether on public or private grounds, and the taste of a former generation, expressed partly in the preservation of the old and partly in the planting of the new, can now after many years be enjoyed to the full at all seasons of the year. At least that is my experience.

The charm is increased by the curvature of the Avenue which, I suppose, follows in the main an old trail. It is not much favored by motorists who prefer the straight and level, so the pedestrian has a peaceful and leisurely progress.

The general effect in the upper part at least is that of a quiet country road with its patches of woodland and occasional far glimpses of the sea and mountains, with here and there a substantial old-fashioned house seen between the trees.

Flaming Glory
ON THIS AUTUMN DAY the color of the miniature patches of forest was truly wonderful. While there are scattered here and there numbers of with a low rough thick mostly leafless or nearly so, except where the snowberry displayed its white fruits. A number of oaks raised their gray gnarled branches with brown and green foliage.

These native oaks are well seen in this area and on the slope towards Richmond Avenue. Some of the trees at the foot of Shady Oak Lane are particularly striking with their massive trunks and great spreading branches, some almost resting on the ground, and all curiously twisted as if to express permanently their hard juvenile struggle with life. Were it not that our oak does not as a rule carry a very large head of foliage these great, roughly horizontal branches would be hard put to it to bear their green burden. In addition to their own picturesqueness they bear at this season and throughout the winter and spring minor colonies of plant life, mosses and lichens, of which at present a rich green velvet moss near the ground is the most noticeable.

Paris Designs Middle Of Century Look

By ROSETTA HARGROVE

LEADING PARIS creators launch what is now called the "middle of the century" look of fashions for fall and winter.

The main points of the new silhouette are widened shoulders, bulk at the top of the figure, a normal waistline and slender skirts which for daytime wear hover between 13 and 15 inches from the floor.

Buttons which reign supreme are often lined up at the back of a dress. Huge collars make news. The most ultra-formal evening dress is the billowing gown or the snake-like sheath.

Christian Dior, still the czar of designers, tops slender skirts with bulky jackets and concentrates fullness at the top of the figure by placing pockets over the bustline, by building voluminous sleeves out from armholes. Typical expression of this mode is the town tailleur which combines a bulky belted-in jacket of grey men's suiting with a slender skirt of darker grey wool.

Jacques Fath favors buttons, and often lines these up at the back of a dress which is kept severely simple in front. Case in point is a frock of grey and white checked wool which owes its interest to impressive files of black buttons lined up the back from hemline to neckline to accent pleats and to draw the eye to a climbing collar. The tall collar of this dress is typical of the new neckline look of fashions.

The redingote with bulk massed at the top of its slender silhouette is new this fall. An enormous collar of skunk and flounced fur-trimmed cuffs, for example, trim a redingote of deep red broadcloth, which makes news in Jeanne Lanvin's collection. The coat is bordered at hemline and closings with bands of matching skunk.

The slender evening sheath ensembled with coats or drapes of extravagant sweep is also typical of the new "middle of the century" look. One ensemble which pits slim gown against the extreme fullness of a companion wrap is seen in a spectacular creation of Jacques Griffe's design. The gown is a draped sheath of mauve wool embroidered with cross motifs of diamonds. The voluminous wrap of white fox, for which 18 skins are banded together in tier-like rows, is lined with mauve crepe that matches the gown.

Way To Deal With Spendthrift Hubby

By RUTH MILLETT

YOU HEAR A LOT about the extravagant wife—but a husband can be the extravagant one and then it's an even tougher problem, for the wife can't "lay down the law" when it's his own money he's throwing around.

One wife writes me: "I come from thrifty people—and the security of money in the bank means a lot to me. But my husband believes in living for today and letting tomorrow take care of itself.

"I pinch pennies when I market, do without clothes, etc., in the hope that we can save some money—and then my husband goes out and buys some expensive gadget or a suit he doesn't need—and all my penny-pinching savings are gone in one reckless purchase. What in the world can I do about it?"

Not much, I'm afraid. Some men don't want their money saved—and if they can't be sold on the idea, a woman's penny-pinching is so much wasted effort.

STOP PENNY PINCHING

Why don't you stop penny pinching for awhile—particularly when it means doing without clothes for yourself, etc. After all, if the money is going to be spent, anyway, you might as well get some of the benefits from it.

If you have no children or if they are at an age where you don't have to be at home all the time you might try getting a full-time or part-time job—and banking your paycheck every week. Tell your husband you intend to put the money you earn aside for the future—and stick by it.

If you can't hold down a job yourself and you can't get your husband to see the importance of a family's saving for the future—there actually isn't much you can do.

But whatever you do, don't nag your husband about money. That won't make him less extravagant.

And remember this: you won't be nearly so resentful when he buys something he wants for himself if you occasionally let yourself go and get something you want for the house or for your own use.

FOR SUNCHASERS

THE BATHING SUITS to be worn on the beaches at Florida this winter will give holidaymakers their maximum quota of sunshine. This is one of the latest from the southern resort. Made of leopard-print sharkskin, it has diaphanous shorts and a shirred bra top that ties halter style. Under the coconut palms, hibiscus blossoms, or on water skis, this wild creation is said to react well.

Velvet Pile Steams Fresh

VELVET AND VELVETEEN hang with new importance in a girl's wardrobe this season, but add new problems to her wardrobe care and cleaning chores.

Because of its pile finish, velvet freshens up and sheds wrinkles most readily after steaming. This can be done at the end of a kettle spout, from a spray rising from a hot iron and damp cloth, or from a steam iron. But a girl who is away at school might find a bathroom an easier way to freshen up her velvet frocks and accessories.

For steaming, close windows, doors and shower curtains and hang velvets or velveteens to be treated on the curtain bar outside of curtains. When the vapor in the room closes in on the velvet duds, brush wrinkles and spots very lightly against the nap with a soft brush. Then remove garments from steam-filled room (before vapor condenses into water droplets and stains fabric) and hang where they won't touch anything until completely dry.

If velvet is to look luxurious, it requires other special attentions: Rain spots may be rubbed off lightly with a small extra scrap of dampened velvet, then brushed with a soft brush. Dust and lint, always a problem with velvet, should be gently stroked off with a soft-bristled brush. (Stiff bristles may injure velvet pile permanently.) Always wear shields with velvet blouses and velvet-topped dresses to avoid perspiration stains. A "lining" of muslin basted across the shoulder and inside the neckline will ward off that "flattened" look that's a good grooming threat.

HAPPY WAY TO FITNESS

You don't have to grind through a regime of "physical jerks" to keep yourself fit. Regular exercise can and should be taken in a pleasant and useful form. Walking, golfing, swimming or cycling are a few fine ways to help keep in trim. And tennis, riding and many other games will do the trick where facilities are available. Keep fit the happy way.

Chicken, Turkey Should Be On November Menu

By GAYNOR MADDOX

AS BOTH TURKEYS and chickens are on the list of November plentiful foods, look to them for welcome economy.

Want something different for Sunday? Then try this chicken gumbo—it's flavorful and rib tickling, made of chicken, ham and vegetables.

CHICKEN GUMBO

(5 to 6 generous servings)

One fowl, 1 quart fresh-skinned chopped tomatoes or canned tomatoes, 1 large onion, chopped, 1 sprig parsley, ½ pound cured ham, 1 quart sliced okra, salt to taste, dash cayenne.

Disjoint the fowl into pieces for serving. Place the pieces in a kettle, add lightly salted water to cover, partly cover the kettle and cook until tender. Simmer; do not boil. Allow 3 to 4 hours. When the bird is about half done, skim off the fat and add to the chicken and skinned broth the tomatoes, onions and parsley. Then dice the ham, or cut into strips, brown the pieces in the ham fat and transfer them to the kettle. Wash and stem the okra and cut in one-half inch slices. In the ham drippings brown the okra and add it also to the chicken. Continue to cook slowly until the chicken and ham are tender and the sauce has a fairly thick consistency. Add salt to taste and a dash of cayenne. Serve with flaky cooked rice.

That recipe and the following are both from cooking experts of Department of Agriculture. For a full-bodied leftover recipe, here's a chicken risotto:

CHICKEN RISOTTO

(Serves 5 to 6)

Two cups or more chopped, cooked chicken, 1 quart chicken broth, 1 onion, chopped, 2 tablespoons butter or other fat, ½ cup rice, grated cheese.

Take the meat off the bones and chop it. Stew the bones in enough water to make a quart of broth and add any leftover gravy that will furnish chicken flavor. In a large frying pan cook the chopped onion for a few minutes in the fat and add the chicken broth. When it boils up rapidly, sprinkle the rice in slowly. Cover the pan, simmer the rice for about 25 minutes, or until the grains swell and become soft. Shake the pan from time to time to keep the rice from sticking, but do not stir it unless absolutely necessary. By the time the rice is done, it will have absorbed the broth, and the grains will be large and separate. Then add the small pieces of the mixture onto a hot platter, and sprinkle generously with grated hard cheese.

TURKEY CHOWDER

Two tablespoons chopped bacon, ¼ cup chopped onion, 1 cup diced celery, 2 cups cubed potatoes, 1 cup diced cooked turkey, 2 cups turkey broth, 1 cup whole kernel canned corn, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, salt, pepper.

Place bacon in frying pan over heat. When some of the fat has been cooked out add the onion. Continue cooking until onion is soft and bacon is brown. Meanwhile, cook celery, potatoes and turkey in broth until the vegetables are tender. Then add corn, cooked bacon, onion and parsley. Blend flour with milk and stir into cooking mixture. Cook about 15 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Season to taste.

Hootin' Owl Pies

Hootin' Owl pies are fine for party evenings. Anybody can make it with its perky top and its luscious lemon filling! Here are the steps:

Mix up as directed, enough packaged pie crust to prepare one baked pie shell. Then make this easy filling. Cream together 4 egg yolks and ¼ cup sugar. Add ¼ cup lemon juice and, stirring often, cook over boiling water, until thickened (about 10 minutes). Remove from heat, and add 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Fold in 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, and pour into the eight-inch baked pie shell.

For the topping, beat stiffly the other 2 egg whites and add slowly, 4 tablespoons sugar, beating until it holds a peak. Use about ½ of this to cover pies. Add 2 tablespoons cocoa to the other ½ of meringue and spread with knife over white meringue to make owl's head and nose as shown. Brown meringues lightly in 325 degrees F. oven for 10-15 minutes. When cool, make one open eye, and one winking eye of owl with marshmallow halves, candy rounds, raisins and whole cloves.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

To give a glamorous finish to upside down apple puffs, put in each muffin pan 1 tsp. red currant jelly before putting in the apple. When baked the jelly will have melted and run down to make a nice bit of color.

NOVEMBER SPECIAL—Cranberry parfait and Swedish jelly cookies use plentiful cranberries.

Make This Cranberry Parfait

CRANBERRY CUBES IN PEAR HALVES

One three-ounce package of cream cheese, ¼ cup mayonnaise, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup whole cranberry sauce, ½ cup evaporated milk, whipped, 6 ripe pears.

Whip up the cream cheese with the mayonnaise and lemon juice. Fold in the cranberry sauce and whipped evaporated milk. Pour into freezing tray and place dividers. To serve, wash, halve and core ripe pears. Place on salad greens and top with 2 cranberry cubes.

CHEESE FOR HEALTH

Cheese is one of our most valuable foods and deserves a prominent place in meals for both adults and children. In fact, nutritionists say it is almost a perfect food, like milk. It contains fat for energy, minerals—particularly calcium and phosphorus—and also vitamin A and B complex, each of which is essential to good health.

Two-Tone Lips Make Lovelier Mouths

THE OUTLINE of the deep-toned lipstick is being made by the girl in the picture above. Inset, she applies the inner lips with a lighter shade of red.

By ALICIA HART

USING A TECHNIQUE borrowed from portrait painters, a girl can "paint" on a more natural, rounded lipline with two different lipstick shades.

Just as artists use darker outlines and lighter highlights painted inside of these when they want to create a lovelier mouth for portrait subjects, make-up artists can do as much for themselves with a new set of tools.

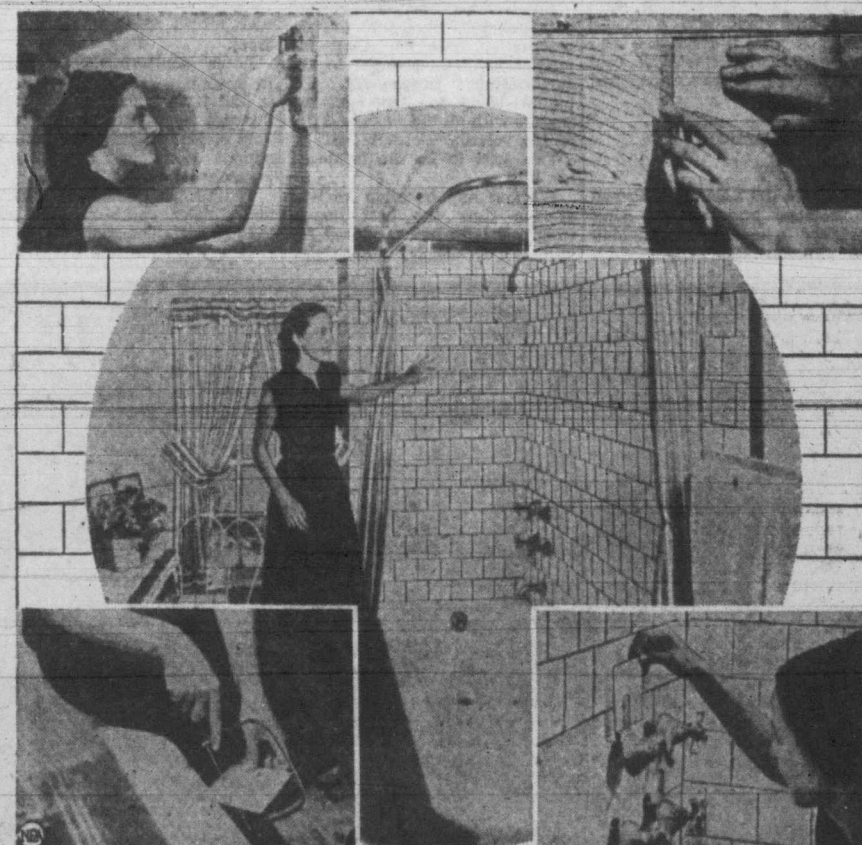

These include two lipsticks, each one of a different shade of red. One lipstick shade is used only to outline and shape the lips. The other is used to fill in the rest of the mouth with the other shade.

The two lipsticks, packaged together, come in cases specially designed for these needs of application. The darker, more vivid lipstick, which is sharply pointed, swivels out of a long slim case so as to be handled as a drawing pencil for sketching outlines. The brighter, lighter lipstick comes shaped in a shorter case with rouge more bluntly pointed, so that filling in from the outline with highlight color is made simpler.

After outline and color are applied, lips are blotted with tissue. This process is repeated if tone-on-tone effect is not distinct.

Home Applied Plastic Tiles Glamourize Bathroom

THIS SHINING, MODERN bathroom shown (centre) was an eyesore until the lady of the house tiled it with new pastel-colored plastic tiles.

To tailor new gluing to her bathroom fixtures, she cuts tile

to fit with coping saw (lower left). Cementing out the fixture (lower right) is last step of the bathroom remodeling job which took five hours, very little money, and no skill.

This project is an example of the help that's at hand for shabby bathrooms—which so many women would like to rescue from ugliness in time to make a prouder display of their homes for the Christmas holidays.

Available in vivid or pastel colors or marbled surfaces, tiles can be glued on to stay by the most unskilled hands. They cover walls of plaster, board or plywood and are available at many department stores, plumbing shops and supply houses.

For cementing tiles, a special cement called "mastic" is available. So is a well-tile cleaner used to sop up smears from freshly cemented walls. A special cement spreader facilitates the job of gluing on tiles. When the problem of fitting tiles around bathroom fixtures presents itself, a coping saw which cuts tile as easily as scissors cuts paper is used.

JOE LOUIS... cast a shadow like a Colossus over the lives of ambitious boxers.

By LOUIS GOLDING

THE SLEEPY-EYED, brown-skinned negro from Detroit slouched lazily back to his corner and slipped off his dressing gown. The muscles of his big bronze shoulders rolled smoothly under the skin as he loosened up against the ropes.

Clang... He came swiftly into the centre of the ring. There was the shuffling sound of feet on canvas, the slap of leather on naked bodies, the sudden harsh intake of breath as a fist jabbed into the white man's stomach.

The young negro struck with the speed of a rocket. There was an explosion of searing lights in Jack Kracken's brain and he spun sickeningly into darkness. It was 1934, a disastrous period for Willie Davies, Larry Udeh, Buck Everett, Alex Borchuk and several other boxers whose names leave no record in the memory. For each of these the year brought lightning execution at the hands of a swift and terrible fighter.

Battered Carnera Into A Wreck

JOE LOUIS, the Brown Bomber, was embarked on his explosive journey to the championship of the world.

The following year they threw the big, mild, child-like Carnera, so-called man-mountain and ex-heavyweight champion of the world, into the same ring as the silent, colored youth.

The metallic sound of the gong had scarcely died away before the Italian was staggering around the ring, his mouth smashed and his good-natured eyes round and horrified.

For round after round the negro, his face emotionless, battered the giant into a pitiful wreck. It was a terrifying and unforgettable spectacle. A cold and methodical execution had taken place.

Defeat Avenged Crushing

THAT SAME YEAR the Brown Bomber knocked out King Levinsky in one round and Max Baer in four. The fight with

Louis' one reverse was the defeat he suffered at the hands of Schmeling—a defeat he crushingly avenged at their next meeting.

But 1937 brought the highspot in Joe Louis' career. On June 22 he knocked out James J. Braddock in eight rounds and became the youngest heavyweight champion the world had known.

Joe Louis held the title longer than anyone since modern prize-ring rules were introduced, and he was undefeated at the end.

The nearest he came to eclipse was at the beginning of his reign, two months after he had won the title.

Denounced Farr As Pushover

HE WAS MATCHED against a certain massive young gentleman from Tonypandy, Wales—a tough fighter named Tommy Farr.

When the American sports writers received the news they dipped their quills into a mixture of eyewash and venom and described the challenger from Wales as a "palooka."

They wrote derisive columns of print denouncing him as a "pushover," handing out complimentary adjectives with the generosity of forgers distributing dud banknotes.

But Tommy Farr, in the face of a policy of persistent misrepresentation, did not limit his pugnacious temperament to the forthcoming ring-battle. He talked back to American reporters with all the flash and fire of his volatile Welsh blood.

This was to be the battle of his life.

Without any question he was at the time the best heavyweight Britain had produced for at least a decade. It is my opinion

These were the Great Fights!

JOE LOUIS Vs. TOMMY FARR

The 'Palooka' Almost Beat Joe Louis

Britain has bred no one his equal since.

He Had Whipped Them All...

LOUGHRAN, OLIN, FOORD, Max Baer, Walter Neusel—he had taken them all and whipped them. I am convinced that if so phenomenal a fighter as Joe Louis had not appeared on the scene Farr would have been heavyweight champion of the world.

He stepped into the ring at the Yankee Stadium on Aug. 30, 1937, with unshakable confidence.

"I'm going to win," he said, and he meant every word of it. A magnificent, proportioned youth in tip-top condition, he was 23 years old, the same age as the champion.

He had studied Louis as a fighter with the expert eyes of a man who was himself veteran of some 200 ring contests. His conclusion was that the Brown Bomber could be beaten.

The fight began quietly. Joe Louis, 197 lb. of sinewy physical perfection, moved with an astonishing but sinister grace. Farr, slightly heavier at 204½ lb., crouched watchfully over his gloved fists and boxed cautiously. He was watching for that annihilating left-hook the Brown Bomber could whip over with the speed of an eye-blink. It was the nearest thing to a charge of dynamite ever possessed by a human being.

Each Blow Stung Viciously

Louis came out with all his menacing, pantherine grace for the third round. He landed repeated savage blows on the face—blows which injured Tommy's eyes and the young Welshman was forced to fight on the retreat.

Louis' shattering right swept in a vicious arc to the jaw. If it had landed, Farr would have dropped as if hit by an avalanche. But it did not land. He slipped away and fought desperately on the defensive.

The Brown Bomber, impassive and sinister, came on. This was his moment. The vast crowd was roaring for the kill. With the

Tommy Had Fine Defence

BUT TOMMY FARR'S defence was superb. He proved that night that he was a better boxer than the champion. From the fourth round onwards he gave Joe Louis the fight of his life.

For 15 rounds Louis came nowhere near landing a knockout punch. If Tommy Farr could achieve that much against the Bomber, then he is great enough to be matched as a defensive boxer with the immortals of the prize-ring, for, in my opinion, Louis stands high among the greatest fighters of them all; a cool, clear-thinking strategist with a punch in either hand more devastating than any champion has shown before, and with the speed in action of a cobra.

That night he retained his title by a narrow margin of points. Many at the Yankee Stadium were of the opinion that the Welshman had been the better man. It was as close as that.

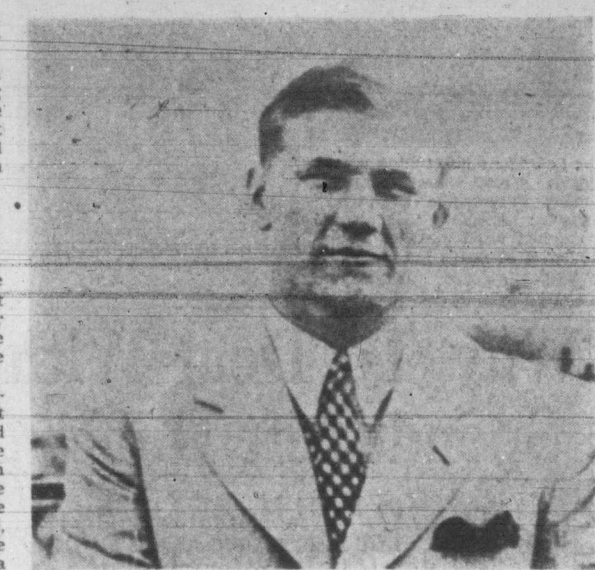

If Farr had succeeded it would have been the second time in history that the honor had been won by a Briton. As it was, Bob Fitzsimmons remains the only British holder of the world heavyweight championship.

Hard To Find A Worthy Successor

NOW JOE LOUIS has followed Tommy Farr into history. He cast a shadow like a Colossus over the lives of ambitious boxers. Impassive, modest, unassuming to a degree hardly equalled by any ring performer, he stood on the plinth of his profession as solid and immovable as if hewn out of granite.

With his retirement from the ring, after reigning for 12 years as its undisputed emperor, there has been a stirring among the gladiators to find a worthy successor.

Ezzard Charles, really a light heavyweight, is meantime accepted in most circles, as the new champion, but there will be no champion worthy of the name until there is a series of properly authorized eliminating contests and one man defeats all the pretenders in the field. If he is half as good a fighter as the Brown Bomber was in his prime, and as modest and unassuming a gentleman, I for one will hail him with enthusiasm.

Claudette Comes To Terms With The Stinking Fish

From JACK METCALFE and PATRICIA CLARY

IF THE current seven days haven't already been spoken for by equally worthy causes, they should be designated "Feel Sorry for Claudette Colbert Week."

That long-suffering comedy star has, according to RKO studio, been driven to the extremes of her endurance. And by a storage bin full of fish, 200 dead, finny, smelly pounds of them.

"This is just about it," she says. "Now I've done everything."

It seems that the script of "Love Is Big Business" calls for her to flip a judo hold on Robert Young and toss him among the potted fish.

Maxie Baer—he's in the movie too—then throws the highly-paid Miss C. in after Young.

Baer himself follows the stars into the scaly mess, though RKO isn't specific about how or why.

MUST BE COMEDY

Just what the slapstick is all about also is left unexplained, but the producers hint the picture is a comedy. And Claudette never was a lass to hang back when a laugh is at stake.

This anything-for-a-guffaw comedienne recalls that she pitched woo to Fred MacMurray while standing waist-deep in mud for "No Time For Love." In "The Egg and I," she chased pigs through the mire. A baby leopard shared her throne in "Cleopatra," and she accidentally knocked herself out while working on "So Proudly We Hail."

"Harold Lloyd would be about the only star," she laments, "who could shed an understanding tear with me about my troubles."

"Sometimes I'm not sure if I'm not getting paid as a stunt woman instead of an actress."

The studio reports, however, that Miss Colbert has settled that question to her own satisfaction.

Whether her four-figure weekly pay check is earned by stunting or acting, she leaped expertly and dramatically into the fish.

Joan Crawford In Her Glory

ONE OF the few movie queens who still upholds the glamour tradition of satins, diamonds, yards of mink and block-long limousines is Joan Crawford.

While other movie dolls are busy being just folks in public, Miss Crawford dresses more like a star off the screen than she does on.

"She has a natural flair for glamour," her personal designer, Sheila O'Brien, said. "That's the kind of woman she is."

Miss Crawford tones down her glittering wardrobe for movies. She dresses simply but well, usually starting, Crawford fans will remember, in a waitress' uniform.

"Movie clothes have to be quite conservative," Miss O'Brien explained. "If a star wears the fashion of the moment in a picture, she's completely dated when the picture is released six months later."

WEARS PAINTED CHIFFON

As an example of Miss Crawford's personal fashion preference, Miss O'Brien cites the Case of the Painted Chiffon. This is a fluffy white evening gown, hand-painted with birds and bees and flowers, in which Miss Crawford floated to a Hollywood party. She wowed 'em.

The Miss Crawford in Warner Bros. "The Victim," her next picture, will be almost as chic as the Miss Crawford of Hollywood parties.

"She's going to be dressed like Mrs. Harrison, Williams or Mrs. Walter Chrysler," Miss O'Brien said.

She wears, among other things, a "breath of spring" mink (that's a $2,000 name for grey), a white mink stole bound around the waist with a jeweled belt, a few dozen plain and fancy evening gowns, a blue romper with no back and daringly short pants, and another beach outfit

Dose Of Hope Comes For Young Spastics

By FRED ZAVATTERO

AFTER YEARS OF PATIENT experiment and effort, a few Seattle women have filled one doctor's prescription for spastic children—a large dose of "hope."

To instill that hope in the minds of spastic or cerebral palsied children has become the special task of the Spastic Committee of Seattle Junior Programs, a voluntary group.

Through a series of painting, dancing and musical programs, the committee has given the children new strength for their battle against an affliction that claims almost as many victims as infantile paralysis.

Cerebral palsy is the result of a brain injury at birth. Depending on the extent of the damage to the brain, the victims suffer a loss of muscular control. A number have speech difficulties. Many must be restrained in wheel chairs, and the most severe cases are unable to perform the simplest tasks without help. All victims have one point in common—there is no cure.

New and more efficient physical therapy methods have helped the children regain a partial control of their muscles, but to gain even the slightest control often requires years of constant effort. Sometimes the effort is too great. The children become despondent and will not try.

Several problems had to be solved before the committee could present its first show. Many parents were reluctant to have the children taken from their homes, and special transportation had to be provided for children confined to wheel chairs.

Stage Fright

IN ADDITION, medical authorities cautioned the committee against an over-stimulating program which might lead to hysteria. With the aid of the Junior Red Cross, other Junior Program members and various spastic aid societies, the committee presented its first show, a ballet, three years ago.

As the audience gathered for the ballet, confusion almost closed the show before the curtain had gone up. Many of the boys and girls had never been in a theatre. Many were frightened and burst into tears. There was the danger that the children might confuse the performance with reality. In an atmosphere of tears and fright, the show began. It was a smash hit.

Then the committee decided to go further. Entertainment provided the children with an introduction to a new world. "But," reasoned the committee, "why shouldn't they participate in that world?"

Ready To Give Up

MRS. FREDERICK E. WOODS, a creative arts teacher and member of Junior Programs, offered to conduct an experimental class in dancing and music to a special group. Testing the children's reaction to puppet shows, rhythm bands and scientific instruction, she was unable to arouse much enthusiasm.

Almost ready to give up, she decided to play a recording from the ballet the boys and girls had seen months before. As she talked about the show, now almost forgotten, she began to play the music.

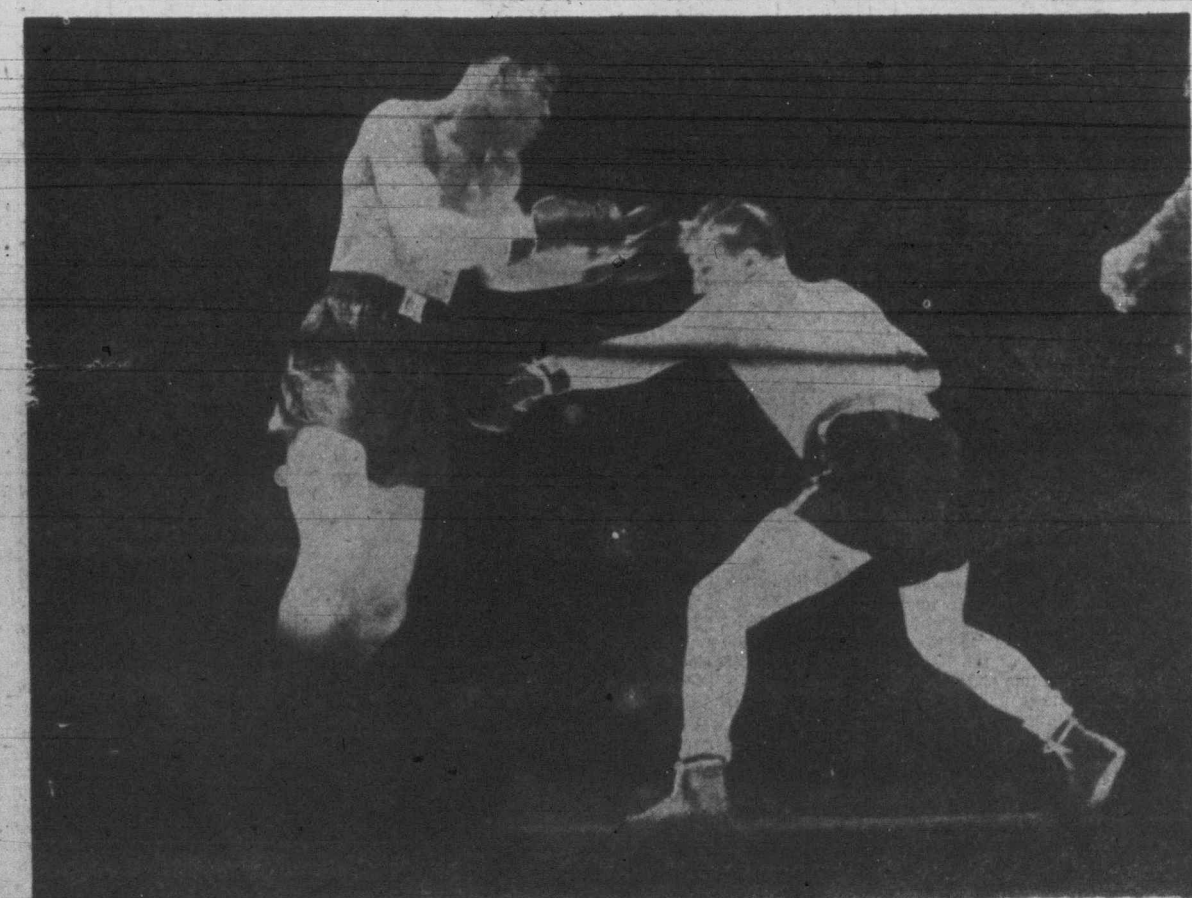

A six-year-old boy who had never tried to talk, tried to dance. A little girl who never spoke voluntarily tried to request a special selection from the show. Mrs. Woods had found an answer. The children would try desperately to imitate the dancers and actors they had seen in the different shows.

Since its initial "confusion" ballet, the committee has added puppet shows, concerts, and movies to its programs. After three years, the "participation" idea is working.

nized instantly that his particular tawny coloring and floppy ears were natural assets to stardom as great as Jane Russell's bustline or Bing Crosby's voice.

Now this lucky dog star strolls from dressing room to dressing room between scenes, always finding a loving caress and a kind word from Miss Blyth, Miss Evans or Jane Wyatt.

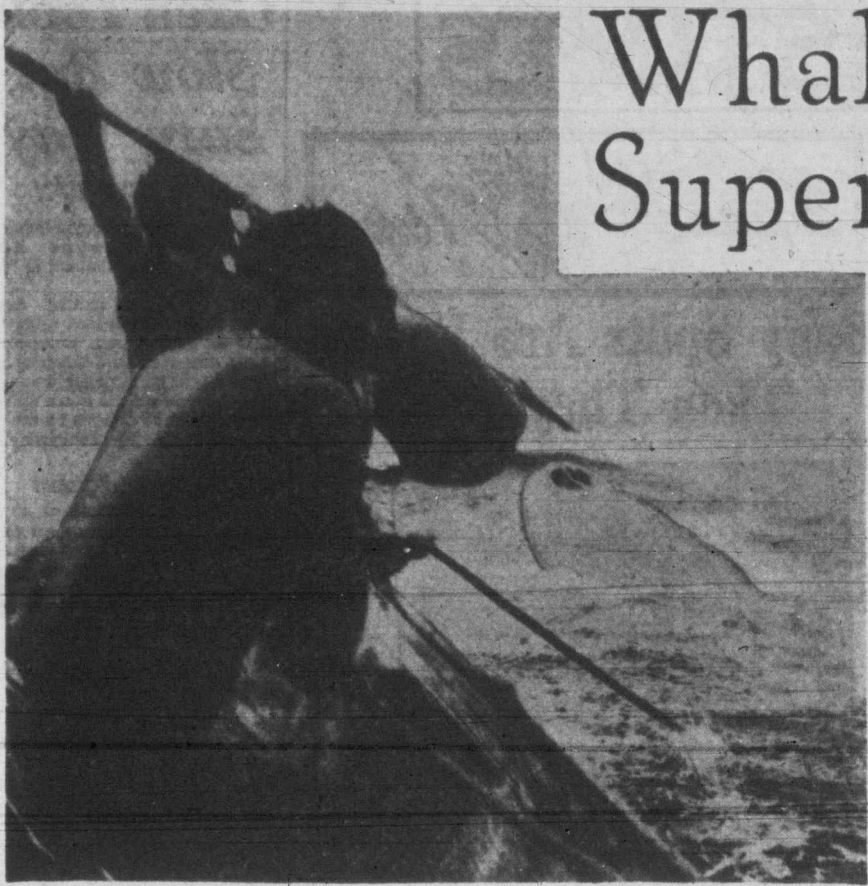

And they call that a dog's life.

Keep Window Box Bright With Winter Flowers

By CECIL SOLL

WHAT ARE YOU GOING to do with the window boxes from Fall until the next April when Summer's flowers are again planted out? There is no need to look out of the window all winter at a bare box with, perhaps, a few straggly weeds trying to grow in it.

The dark days of winter generally mean that, although the garden may be neat and tidy, it will not have too bright a flower display and will look a little bare when the leaves are off the trees. Why not, then, have a bright and attractive window box to catch the eye with its color at first glance out of the window on a dull day?

The window box is the first thing anyone notices, whether they are looking out or in through the window, so plan to have it neat, attractive and full of winter flowers that are not only lovely to look at, but will have a sweet perfume ready to be wafted into the house every time the window is opened.

The plants that can be used are quite inexpensive. They are all easy to grow and may be used from year to year, being ousted from their window position only when the time for planting the summer flowers arrives. They are then set out into any suitable place in the garden, to rest until the next fall. Then, back they go into the window box as soon as the summer flowers are over, to repeat their attractive winter show again.

Time To Act

AS SOON as the summer plants, growing in the window box, begin to look "manky" and cease to flower profusely, it is time to remove them. Do not let an unkempt and bedraggled show spoil your remembrance of the bright summer-long display. Most of the plants used in window boxes are annuals. They cannot live over the winter, so it is best to pull them out and dispose of them.

After all the plants have been removed from the box, thought should be given to the soil. Note whether it is mossy or still clean and good. Generally, the conditions under which plants have to row in a window box make it necessary to use all new and enriched soil at each planting. However, provided the summer plants gave a display that was quite satisfactory, then the same soil may be used over.

The simplest method of soil treatment is to remove it from the box. Place a piece of burlap down on the lawn to receive the old soil. It is then generally necessary to mix more humus, charcoal and commercial fertilizer with the soil. This should be thoroughly stirred and left to remain on the burlap until the next day when the new mixture may be returned to the box. The reason for the addition of these materials is to provide suitable porosity to the soil.

Clean The Box

INSPECT the box to see that there are no insects—especially sow-bugs—hiding in cracks or knot-holes. To prevent carry-over of any plant diseases, some gardeners burn out the inside of the window box each year. Others wipe out or wash the inside of the window box each year, with formaldehyde. On no account should the inside of the window box be painted.

Before refilling the box with new or renewed soil place some new drainage material at the bottom of the box. One inch depth of mixture of small stones and charcoal, both in size about from pea-size to that of a walnut, is generally sufficient. To the drainage material is then added enough coarse sand to fill in the spaces but not to raise the level of the mixture.

Over this should be spread about a half-inch of coarse peat-moss. This material is placed to prevent the fine soil particles from above passing to the bottom, where they would be liable to clog drainage holes.

The new soil is then placed in the box. It should be slightly moist and needs to be pressed down firmly. Many gardeners find that they can get just the right pressure by using the balls of the hands. The soil should reach to within one inch of the rim of the box and should be left, after the box is filled, for a couple of days before the new planting is done.

Since it is generally more convenient for most people to do the filling and planting all on one day, it should be remembered that the advised couple of days are necessary for soil settling, and if all the work has been done in one day, greater care should be taken when firming the soil.

Suitable Heathers

FOR AN ordinary window box, the first plants to consider are the winter flowering and Mediterranean Hybrid Heathers. There are several varieties in colors of purple and red. The new sorts with bright reddish flowers such as E. Carnea are very popular for winter window boxes. They are in flower all winter. If one plant is set at each end of the box and one or two spaced at intervals between, according to the size of the box, this is sufficient. These winter blooming heathers, contrary to general belief, do not need an acid soil; in fact, they thrive in calcareous soils, which is what the other plants to be recommended also enjoy. (Calcareous: containing calcium.)

Between the heathers may be used enough pansies to fill the vacant spaces. It is important to know that in the pansy family there is one branch—the Hyemalis, or Ice Pansies—that are eminently suited to winter window boxes. These Ice Pansies are grown in quantity here and are sold by many nurseries and stores. Plants may also be grown from seed started in June-July, or cuttings may be taken from plants used the winter before, when they were removed in late spring.

These winter blooming pansies are extremely hardy. They grow in a fine bushy form, commencing to flower in November or December. A severe frost or snow sometimes sets them back but only for a few days, after which they "come back" with a great quantity of new flowers and seem to have benefited by the "shock."

Have Sweet Scent

WINTER blooming pansies are all very sweetly perfumed. If the window is left open a few inches when they are in flower, they scent the room pleasantly with "violets." There is a wide range of colors from which to choose. Among the best are Winter Sun, a golden yellow with the maroon blotch on the lower petals; Ice King, silver white with deep blue blotch; Celestial Queen, a bright sky blue, with tinted lavender, with small yellow eye; and March Beauty, a rich violet purple with yellow eye. There are also several other lovely sorts without names that are to be obtained from growers here. All varieties can be purchased in plants, generally with at least one flower, so that they may be planted to a planned color scheme.

Many gardeners like to combine the winter blooming pansies' colors indiscriminately, but if bulbs of one color are being used, color scheming is quite simple and generally the pansies look better if all one color is maintained in each box.

Plant Bulbs Below

THERE ARE many spring flowering bulbs that may be grown in the winter window boxes, to give an even more lovely display when they flower. The bulbs are generally planted underneath the pansies. They will thrust themselves up through these plants and provide a most attractive early spring show. When choosing any bulbs, be sure to select those that grow to an ultimate height of not more than 18 inches. The taller garden bulbs are not satisfactory for window boxes because their height is too great for this kind of display.

Forget-me-nots are just as good with tulips in a window box as they are in the garden. Should you have some spare seedlings, try them in one of the window boxes. The old-fashioned myosotis palustris is generally considered too straggly for this kind of planting but the more modern compact variety, Ruth Fisher, which is a deep blue, is just fine under tulips or hyacinths. Since the winter pansies flower so much earlier than the forget-me-nots, they are generally preferred, but either one is excellent.

Hyacinths are one of the most satisfactory of window box bulbs. They can be relied upon to do well in any season. They are all sweet-scented and flower a little earlier than they do in the garden. There is a wide range of sorts and colors from which to choose. The Pink Lady Derby hyacinth with Celestial Queen pansy makes a fine combination. Any good red hyacinth with Winter Sun pansy is an other good pair. Hyacinths should be grouped in threes or fours for the best display.

Economical Tulips

THE ORDINARY Darwin, and other generally-used garden tulips are too tall for most window boxes. There are several short sorts, however, that are quite satisfactory. The Single Early, Double Early and Red Emperor varieties all grow from 8 to 15 inches high. There are many color varieties to choose from in these groups. The bulbs are for sale at the garden stores in fall. There are also several lovely varieties of Rock Garden tulips that are fine for window boxes. Some of these are Clusiana, Eichelri, etc.

The great value of all these tulips is that, after they have

YOU MAY HAVE BEEN thrilled at bronco busters or at a cowboy riding a brahma bull at a Western rodeo. But what would be your reaction if you saw a man riding on the back of a whale on the foaming water of the Pacific? Fantastic as it may seem, such spectacular feats were achieved by West Coast Vancouver Island Indians.

To some of the former hardy Nootkans and Quileutes of Vancouver Island and the Makah Indians of Cape Flattery go the honor of being the only men to have ridden on the backs of living whales. This achievement is the nearest approach to Jonah who, we are told, did one better by riding in the belly of a whale and living to tell the tale.

Leaps On Whale

PICTURE THEN a hunter leaping from the slender dugout canoe onto the back of a wounded 60-foot whale. He would cling fast to the harpoon lines, take a deep breath and go "down under" with the sea monster. When the whale reappeared the hunter would hack at his quarry's back with a knife.

Man and the world's largest mammal would be locked in a grim life and death battle under and above water till one or the other gave in. Again and again the midge and the giant would roll forward under water, disappear from sight, and a moment later appear again. Man usually won in the fierce struggle.

Hampered By Floats

SEVERAL AIR-FILLED seal skin floats or buoys attached to harpoon lines made it possible for the whaler to go down under with the cetacean. The buoys hampered the movements of the wounded animal and prevented him from going down to any great depths.

Though this may sound like a Paul Bunyan fantasy, competent observers of native life have recorded exploits of the kind. Several Nootkan chiefs accomplished the feat. One Malak Indian, nicknamed Santa Anna, who died not so long ago, would dispatch a whale in this way when his canoe men got tired of trying to kill the tenacious wounded animal with harpoons and lances.

To avoid any misconception, however, not all whale hunters made a practice of finishing a wounded whale in this manner, but all were trained to prepare for such an emergency. They would practice holding their

Major Achievement

EVEN IF YOU eliminate this spectacular feat, the mere fact of Indians being able to kill whales with primitive weapons is an achievement hard to equal. The natives of the West Coast of Vancouver Island and neighbors to the south, were the only ones to go out whale hunting. The other tribes, even the fierce Haides of the Queen Charlotte, preferred to wait for them to be washed up on the beaches.

The hunters in a 30-foot dugout canoe with its projecting prow, high spurn-shaped stern and flaring gunwales, would paddle well out of sight of land to find their prey. Though inferior to the white man's boat, the canoe was light and buoyant and would ride the huge Pacific rollers with ease. Sometimes a violent storm overtook the hunters, but they appeared to be able to weather the turbulent seas in their frail boats.

They were expert seamen and though without compasses they could always find their way back home when caught in a fog. The writer was informed by an Indian at Topfino that he could find his direction by the color of the water off-shore and tidal currents.

Shell Harpoon Blades

THE HEADS of their harpoons consisted of pairs of pointed barbs made of bone. The blades were made of large mussel-shells and in later years of copper and steel. The whole was bound up firmly with cord and strips of cherry bark. The lines were attached to the heads. The harpoon shaft was detachable from the head as soon as it struck the whale.

Now imagine one of these shell-like canoes, manned by a crew of six, suddenly darting alongside a 60-foot whale. The canoe might get as close as four feet to its quarry before the harpooner would launch his 16-foot

May Shatter Boat

WITHIN THOSE few moments the life of the crew hung in the balance. If the whale was struck as his tail was in the air then he was likely to shatter the boat to pieces and kill the occupants. Sometimes the animal would flit water and swamp the canoe. A coil of harpoon line fouling might capsize the canoe.

The battle was on. It might take the hunters more than a day to kill the whale. Other canoes joined in the hunt as soon as the chief harpooner had launched his weapon. The hunters pursued the animal and whenever possible planted other harpoons. To each harpoon was attached an inflated sealskin buoy. This soon hampered the animal's progress. A whale struck several times was not able to go more than six or eight feet below the surface due to these floaters. This was when a daring young Indian might decide to shorten the battle by leaping on the whale's back.

No Longer Whaling

THE INDIANS LEFT whaling in the twenties. Today only the stories and exploits of these daredevils remain.

You might think the most important aspect of a whale hunt to the Indians would be in learning to approach and strike a whale. But this was not so. The hunters attached more importance to the observance of secret religious ceremonies before and during the hunt. This was considered essential to success.

One of the last surviving Indian whalers threw some light on the secret hunting ritual when he came to Victoria a month ago. He was Chief John Moses of Sarita, who claimed to be the last survivor of five generations of whale hunters.

Broad shouldered and slightly stooped, the aged chief, wearing a pair of coal black sun glasses, came to see Dr. Clifford Carl, director of the Provincial Museum. He was hard up for cash and wanted to sell his primitive whaling equipment.

Used Magic Twigs

THE CHIEF, who could not speak a word of English, brought with him an interpreter. In a deep resonant voice he told how he was trained to become a sea hunter and described how he killed his first whale.

He related he was 16 years old when he persuaded his grandfather to teach him to become a hunter. He was first given some special medicine and then was escorted into the woods where he fasted and prayed for four days. During this period he had to bath at dawn in cold sea water and rub himself with a bundle of twigs.

He pointed to a bundle of hemlock twigs among the curios laid out on the director's desk. "I rubbed those twigs on my body, especially on my shins," he said. "They are supposed to contain magic and give me power over the whale."

He then pointed to a fascinating cap made of cedar bark which lay on the table with the whaling gear. Fastened to the cap were eagle feathers and a number of wooden models of whales. In the centre was fastened the harpoon head used in a hunt and attached to this was a rope of cedar bark.

He explained he wore the headgear at a religious dance at which he imitated the actions of a whale. He sang and prayed for success at the same time. The purpose of these religious devotions were to gain power over the whale.

Sights Whale

ON THE FOURTH DAY, the chief said he set off in a 30-foot canoe with six men in search of a whale. Other canoes followed behind. As chief harpooner and leader, his position was at the bow of dugout boat. He carried a 16-foot harpoon to which was attached 24 feet of tough whale sinew rope. Cedar bark lines, lances and several seal skin floats were also stowed in the canoe.

They were 10 miles out to sea when they spotted a whale blowing in the distance. The steerman, an experienced whaler, then changed his course to cut the whale off.

The chief attributed their success in approaching the whale to the spirits. "We were lucky," he said. "We managed to run up to within two feet of the whale. Instead of sounding as most whales do it remained at the surface so great was our power over him."

The chief admitted it was a pretty tense moment. He struck the whale with his harpoon. The paddlers immediately began to back water from the quarry. The man behind him tied a float to the harpoon line. As the whale sounded and took the line, additional floats were bent on new lines.

The whaler did not elaborate on how long it took to kill the whale. "Evidently it was killed," he said. "It took three days to kill and tow the whale ashore."

Whaler Honored

THE SUCCESSFUL HUNT was celebrated by his people, the chief said. As a mark of honor, a large piece of blubber from the back of the animal was decorated with eagle feathers and placed on a rack over his bed. Later the oil from this blubber was shared between the members of his crew.

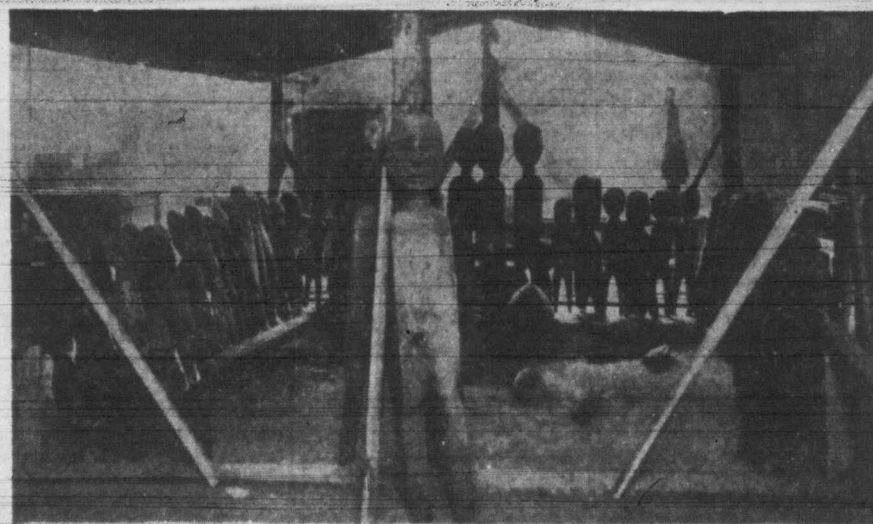

As a trophy, the chief said he was given the two eyes of the whale.

The remainder of the whale was cut and distributed. The black flesh was eaten, the sinews were used for rope. Even the digestive organs of the animal were kept and used as containers for oil.

Dr. Carl bought the chief's whaling equipment which included a seal skin buoy which Moses said was 400 years old.

"There goes, I believe, the last of the Indian whalers," he said.

CEREMONIAL HOUSE—Indians attached great importance to mystic rituals prior to going off on a whale hunt. This house was used by Nootkan Indians for their religious hunting ceremonies.

Garden Tasks In November

By V. W. AHIER

When the weather is fine, clean up the garden and make it tidy for the winter. Put all refuse, fallen leaves, and crop debris on the compost heap, excepting that which is suspected of carrying disease spores. Add your favorite rotting medium.

If your soil is heavy, dig, and leave rough over winter, but if you have a light soil, defer digging until spring. During wet other good pair. Hyacinths should be grouped in threes or fours for the best display.

By using a fresh lot of tulips (or hyacinths) of different colors each year, the winter window box may provide a new color scheme each year at little expense, and a good future display for the garden.

Small Bulbs—As an edging to the box, especially on the side nearest the window, a very early bright and colorful show may be arranged by planting a couple of dozen bulbs of Crocus Muscari, Scilla Siberica or other like bulbs. Because these bulbs flower much earlier than when they are in the garden, they generally provide spring's first flowers in the window box.

weather clean up the garden tools, make necessary repairs, and paint the handles of the smaller tools a bright color. They are much easier to find when laid down amongst plants or weeds.

Don't forget your "garden plan." A sketch drawn now served their purpose as a window box display, they may be planted out in the garden, where they can be used for many succeeding years.

Check over the stored potatoes and sprinkle lime or Flowers of Sulphur among them to arrest decay.

Spring flowering bulbs should be making their roots now so get them in without delay. Sweet peas may be sown in flats or small pots and carried over winter in a cold frame. Depressions in the lawn should be leveled with fine soil. If it is not too deep the original grass will come through and re-seeding will not be necessary.

Prune peach trees as soon as the leaves begin to fall, remembering that the fruit is borne on the new wood, i.e., this year's growth bears next year's fruit.

Under The Cloches

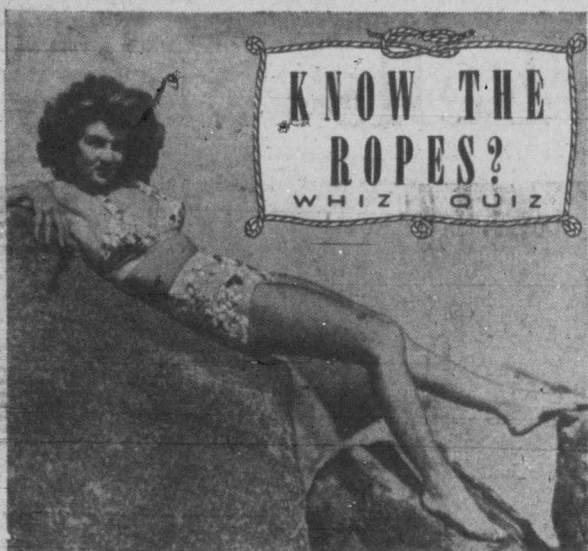

By L. F. STRUTT

The tomato crop will have ripened by early November and your cloches should be placed over the winter lettuce seedlings. These, if not sown "in situ," should be pricked out, two rows to the cloche width with nine inches between plants. A row of spring onions (White Lisbon) and French Breakfast radish, sown between the lettuce rows, will be useful to pull when salads are scarce. Alternatively, a row of Meteor, or Laxton's Superb, peas may be sown between the lettuce rows about the third week of November, but they are somewhat of a gamble because they will need decloching by the end of March, and the flowers may possibly be damaged by a late frost.

Prickly spinach, sown now, will make a welcome addition to the menu when one has become a little tired of cabbage. It thrives best in a soil rich in humus, and for its health-giving properties alone is well worth including in every gardener's cropping schedule.

This is a good time to give your cloches a good cleaning. Replace broken glasses and wash off the remainder of summer shade and accumulated dust. Light intensity is one of the most vital factors in plant growth during the winter months and the great advantage cloches have over cold frames is the absence of wooden walls to throw shadow. However, it is essential that the glass be kept clean in order to admit all possible light. The effect of light on growth may be readily appreciated by comparing plants located at the front of a cold frame with those at the back which receive full sunlight.

MCKENNEY Answers Your

CANASTA

Questions

Freezing Pack Is Good Defensive Play

WHILE I BELIEVE Canasta is going to be most popular with the masses, I find many of our outstanding card players are also making a study of the game.

One of these is John Crawford, of Philadelphia, who is an expert on all types of card games. I am going to ask Mr. Crawford a number of questions on the different techniques he used in the game.

Question: Mr. Crawford, in playing four-handed canasta you explain to my readers some important points in partnership play?

Answer: Watch your partner's discards. Then take into consideration your left-hand opponent's discard to your partner. This will tell you what cards your partner does not want, when he refuses to pick them up. Also you can discard the same cards as your partner discards.

In other words, you should try to keep the same cards you think your partner has, and in this way you both are more apt to be saving the same cards. The above applies mostly when you and your partner need 120 points for your initial meld.

When you need 50 or 90 points for your initial meld the game is apt to proceed too quickly to develop your hand in any particular manner. Also, if you discard the same cards as your partner, they are apt to be used by your left-hand opponent. (Since your partner doesn't have it, your opponents probably have.)

Another important point to remember in four-handed canasta is, if your side needs 120 meld and you do not have the jokers or wild cards, then it is up to you to play to protect your partner. In other words, one hand plays to meld 120 points while the other partner tries to build up his hand so that he will be able to play off his partner's hand.

Question: Mr. Crawford, what strategy is employed to make it difficult for the opponents to freeze the pack on you?

Answer: Remember that freezing the pack is primarily a defensive action, therefore if you have apparent control of the game, play your hand so as to embarrass your opponents.

If you have a great many melds on the table you will find that the opponents will be forced to freeze the pack as a defensive measure. In other words, they do not want to continue giving you cards which you can play on one of your melds, in addition to letting you pick up the pack. Therefore the offensive strategy against a freeze is for you not to put down too many of your melds.

For example: If you had picked up the pack and your hand now contained five 6's, five 10's, three 7's and three 4's, only meld three of the 6's and three 10's. Hold the three 7's and the three 4's. Also keep the two 6's and the two 10's in your hand. This is a protection against the possibility of the pack being frozen. It will also give you many more chances to match the up-card on the pile with a pair if the pack is frozen.

Question: It seems fairly easy to get a concealed hand in four-handed canasta. Is it good strategy to play for a concealed hand?

Answer: It certainly is not. In four-handed canasta you should never try for a concealed hand. Not only will you very likely get caught with it, but you may be forcing your partner to wreck his hand, because you have refused to make the proper meld.

Question: If the pack is frozen and my right-hand opponent discards a card of which I have a natural pair in my hand, can I count this card in my initial meld? In other words, I have two aces in my hand and the up-card is an ace, and I need 50 points for my initial meld. I know I can take the pack, but can I count this third ace to help me make my initial meld?

Answer: You most certainly can. The up-card can be counted as part of your minimum meld if you wish, but no other card in the discard pile can be used for that purpose. After you have legally melded the up-card and picked up the pack, you can proceed to play cards from the pack onto your melds or make new melds.

Question: Can two canastas of the same rank be formed by a partnership? Suppose that we put down four eight-spots and then add three wild cards to it, forming a mixed canasta. Could we later put down four more eight-spots and add three wild cards, forming another eight-spot canasta?

Answer: Yes, you can have two canastas of the same rank. However, if you meld a mixed

AN EVEN BREAK

A real estate man sold two lots for $750 each, to one customer. His profit on one lot was 25% but on the other lot he lost 25%. Did he break even on the transaction? Answer correctly in one minute, if you think you're smart.

Answer: He did not come out even. He lost $125 on the lot he sold for $750. He gained $187.50 on the lot he sold for $1125. His net gain was $62.50.

Solve Detective Problem

WHEN Mrs. Con Science became the mayor of Anyville, she began trying to fulfill her campaign promises. She called in the Chief of Police and told him that to keep his job, he had to close up the horse-betting rooms, slot-machine parlors, so-called night clubs which were selling liquor to teen-agers, and other rackets.

"Just what I wanted to hear," said the chief. "I've always wanted to clean up this town and make it safe for my own kids. But my hands were tied by politicians who made deals."

Immediately after leaving City Hall, he issued pointed instructions to every man on the force.

Suppose that you are star investigator in the Confidential Squad, and you're assigned to get all the dope on the man who, behind all the camouflage and go-betweens, actually runs the gang which controls local rackets.

Here is what you find out: The man who is boss of the crime syndicate probably is Lefty Scartino. He's about 42 or 43, and came to town from Brooklyn, where he had some kind of tie-up with Murder Inc. He's supposed to have some sort of brokerage business, but lives beyond the income such a business would provide legitimately. By the sheerest coincidence the daughter of the widow your step-brother married is employed at the brokerage business as a secretary. This step-brother is younger than Scartino, and was only 35 when he married the older woman with the grown daughter. In dealing with an unprincipled gang of criminals, any method of getting information seems to the police to be fair, but they must, of course, consider whether such evidence as they get will stand up in court, and there's a question of how far to go in pinning things on Scartino.

Now, having read all this, you should know whether the detective who is pitted against Lefty Scartino is older or younger than Lefty. What is the answer?

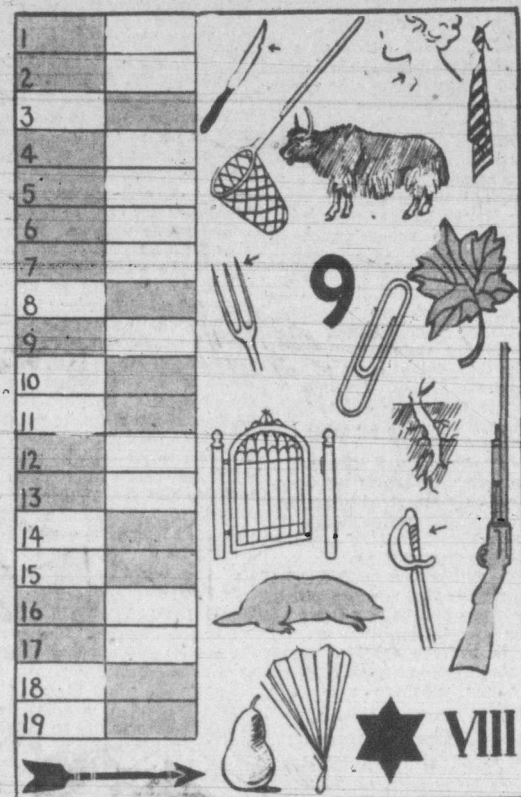

Answer: This is one of those tricky questions. The answer is that the detective is older than Lefty. Lefty is 42 or 43, and the detective is 42 or 43, and the detective is older than Lefty.

FIND THE FAMOUS NAMES

IN THE WHITE panels of this puzzle, write the words defined below. In the shaded panels, write the names of the objects in the drawing. The two words which are written beside each other should differ by one letter, unless the picture illustrates the word defined, in which case the two words will be the same. Take the initial letters of the words in the shaded panels and the letters in the words in the white panels by which they differ from the words in the shaded panels. These letters, read downward, will spell in the first vertical column a woman's name synonymous with Good Samaritan. In the second vertical column the selected letters will spell the name of a war hero who became a President of the U.S.

Here are the definitions:

1. Merriment.

New Convention Shows Two-Bid Responses

In my daily articles this week I have dealt with the Point-count System of Bidding, taken from Fred L. Karpin's new book of that title.

These articles have dealt with the new convention for showing aces and kings in response to an opening bid of two in a suit.

Mr. Karpin gives seven different responses to the opening two-bid in a suit.

1. With one ace bid three no trump.
2. With two kings bid three no trump.
3. With three kings bid three no trump and then four no trump.
4. With an ace and two kings bid the ace first and then jump to four no trump.
5. With an ace-king of one suit and another king, jump in the ace-king first. Then bid four no trump.
6. With an ace in one suit and canasta as described above, then gradually add four more melds to it, you cannot add three more wild cards and make a second canasta out of the second group of four eights. Having placed a card with a meld, you can never separate it from that meld.

You may add the four eights and the three wild cards if you want to, but you will get the bonus for only one canasta. The added cards will be scored at their point value only. In order to score two canasta bonuses for cards of the same rank, you must meld them in two separate and distinct canastas.

a king in another bid the ace first and then the king suit. If the king is in a suit bid by opener, jump when bidding the king.

6. If you have only one ace and it is in a rebiddable suit, bid the ace first and then rebid that suit.

7. Holding none of the above bid two no trump.

(a) With one king, first bid two no trump. Then you can bid the king suit if below game level.

STAMPS

Duncan Man Wins Cherished London Medal For B.C. Collection

THE GREATER VICTORIA Philatelic Society held a successful little stamp exhibition at the King's Daughters' Rooms on Oct. 28, nearly 20 members displaying frames.

In the junior class Billy Wilson got first prize for his nicely arranged collection of Canada, Lorne Campbell coming second.

Miss Isobel McRae was awarded a first in the senior section, also for Canada, while Chas. Guernsey got second prize for an interesting showing of 19th Century British Columbia town cancellations struck on Canadian stamps of the period. These were arranged on a map of the province so that the location of each post office was marked by the stamp mounted along side of it.

The only prize in the championship class (for members who had already won awards in previous exhibitions) went to Miss Jessie Gordon for her artistically presented collection of New Zealand.

Many of the exhibits were of unusual interest, among which may be mentioned Miss Jean Robert's frames of covers (including old family correspondence from San Juan Island while its ownership was still undetermined), S. H. Newberry's local stamps of the Spanish Civil War, and Abner Garland's "Educational Philately," all of which made it apparent that there are many fascinating by-ways which may be followed while pursuing the hobby.

The improvement in write-up and presentation of all the exhibits was quite marked this year and reflected the excellent educational influence the Society has had on the collecting habits of the members.

Spare Time

Baby Splits Are Easier Than They Look

Former Match-Game Bowling

Champion

For the 3-6 10 or the 3-7 10, use the same procedure.

For the 2-7, reverse the process, getting over to the right side of the approach and aiming for the 4-pin spot between the two.

Because of the angle at which the ball is hooking, this baby split is a bit easier than the 3-10 for a right-handed bowler. The 2-4-7 and the 2-7-10 require the same method.

Confidence plays a big part in shooting the baby splits. Play with the feeling you are going to make the spare, and you have half the battle won. They are not nearly as difficult as they appear.

Oxen Took Slow But Sure Way

By UNCLE RAY

AN OLD WAY to pay a man a compliment about his muscles is to say that he is "as strong as an ox."

No man, no matter how strong, could pull a load equal to what an ox can pull. Compared to his own weight, a wrestler or boxer might be stronger than an ox, but an ox weighs much more. A good-sized ox weighs as much as eight or 10 heavyweight wrestlers.

OXEN TRAMPLED GRAIN

From the early times of written history, oxen have been employed by men. The ancient Egyptians used them to trample grain and to draw plows. They have been hitched to carts by people of a hundred countries.

To this day there are lands in Europe where two-wheeled ox-carts are in common use. Four-wheeled wagons also are drawn by oxen, and the animals play a big part in field work on the farms of Europe.

On our own continent oxen played a part in the westward march of settlers, across mountains and plains. They pulled covered wagons during the gold rush to California a century ago.

OXEN IN ARGENTINA

Much the same story may be told about the settlement of parts of South America. Pioneers who traveled to southern and western sections of Argentina hitched oxen to wagons with wheels of huge size. Sometimes the wheels were 10 or 12 feet in diameter.

Oxen fill even a larger place in Asia than in Europe or South America. In Asia there are sections where oxen are the only animals which pull loads, though elephants, horses, donkeys and camels do such work in other parts of the Orient.

Oxen are slow-moving beasts. They have strength but little speed. They travel, as a rule, at the rate of only three or four miles an hour.

BULLOCKS ARE FASTER

The only oxen I have seen move fairly fast are bullocks, or young bulls. In Ceylon I saw bullocks trotting along as they pulled carts. I did not test them with a watch, but I believe that they made a speed of six or eight miles an hour.

That is a good rate of travel for any member of the ox tribe, but think of the changes in people's ideas of speed during the past century! Railway trains often go from 60 to 100 miles an hour, and the engineers could go even faster if they wanted to do so.

If a young ox, or bullock, can trot along a street at the rate of six or eight miles an hour, it makes far better time than oxen did on this continent a century ago!

MADE SLOW PROGRESS

When the Forty-niners were on their way to California, they did well when they traveled 12 or 15 miles in a day. Over muddy stretches on the plains, the oxen sometimes failed to drag a covered wagon for three miles before work was called off for the day.

Airplanes of the present time can carry passengers across the continent from New York to California in nine hours. That is a great change, but still better speed is to be expected. Very likely there will come a time within 15 or 20 years when rockets, or rocket planes, will take people from coast to coast in a single hour.

Dragon Met His Match

AMONG THE GREEK heroes who are supposed to have slain dragons are Perseus and Hercules.

In Rome there came a time when people "took a fancy" to the dragon. Many groups of Roman soldiers carried pictures of dragons, along with images of war-eagles.

The dragon was used as a standard by Saxon soldiers of early England. Later after England was conquered by the Normans—the dragon appeared on banners and shields which English soldiers carried into battle.

Some coats-of-arms of British families are adorned with figures of dragons. England, however, has made a hero of a man who is supposed to have killed a dragon long ago. This hero is known as St. George, and he is called "the patron saint of England."

Here, in short modern form, is the legend of St. George which was printed by Caxton, a pioneer English printer.

"The people of the city of Lybhe in Lybhe were saddened by the presence of a dragon which demanded food each day. At first they gave two sheep each day, but later they gave their own children, chosen by lot.

"After a time the lot fell on the daughter of the king. He begged his people to let him give silver and gold instead of his daughter, but they refused, saying they would burn him and his palace if he did not stand by the rule.

"The king at last gave in and led the princess to the place where the dragon would come.

"While she was sitting there, fearful and alone, along came St. George and asked her what was the matter. When she told him, he decided to do battle against the dragon.

"The dragon came running toward them. St. George leveled his spear and rode forward. The dragon was knocked to the ground, badly wounded.

"St. George and the princess then led the dragon into the city. In the sight of the people he killed it. The body was loaded on four ox-carts, and was taken away and thrown in the fields."

Gavilan Believes Fight With Felton At Detroit 'Fixed'

DETROIT (UP) — Welterweight Kid Gavilan, who lost a much-boomed bout to unknown Lester Felton here Oct. 21, told the Michigan Boxing Commission today "I think the fight was fixed."

Gavilan, ordered to appear at an inquiry of the split decision, said "he heard referee (Marty Sherman) say something" to Felton at the end of the sixth or seventh round as he went to his corner.

"I think he told Felton to 'make a point,' the Cuban welterweight said. Reporters were not able immediately to question Gavilan further.

The Detroit bout was booted for 15 minutes by a disgusted crowd. Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy ordered an investigation of rumors of "heavy eastern betting," and the Boxing Commission started its own probe.

Gavilan's co-manager, Fernando Balido, did not specifically claim a "fix" when he appeared as the first witness before the commission.

When asked by Boxing Commissioner Floyd Stevens if "there was a fix," Balido said "there was an interpreter."

"I believe something was wrong, but I don't know how it could have been done."

He said he wasn't sure and had no facts as to irregularities in the 2 to 1 decision.

Third Mrs. Mature Files Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The third Mrs. Victor Mature, accusing her actor-husband of threatening to burn their house down, has slipped him a legal hotfoot—a suit for divorce.

Mrs. Mature, the former Dorothy Berry, contends in her complaint filed Friday that since their 1948 marriage, the big actor had caused her great suffering. Listing his salary as $2,750 a week, she asked $1,000 monthly alimony and a division of extensive community property.

She also filed an affidavit stating Mature had threatened to set their $25,000 home ablaze if she asked for property. The court granted her a restraining order forbidding him from disposing of any assets pending trial.
